PREFACE

On the following pages I am pleased to present the Official and Statistical Register of Mississippi for the period 1980-1984. The Official and Statistical Register is published in compliance with the requirements of Section 39-5-15 of the Mississippi Code of 1972 and in accordance with a desire to keep the people of this State informed concerning the affairs of the State of Mississippi.

It is the hope of the Secretary of State's Office that the information found in this Register is accurately and properly presented and that the same might be found useful to the public.

Respectfully yours,

Edwin Lloyd Pittman

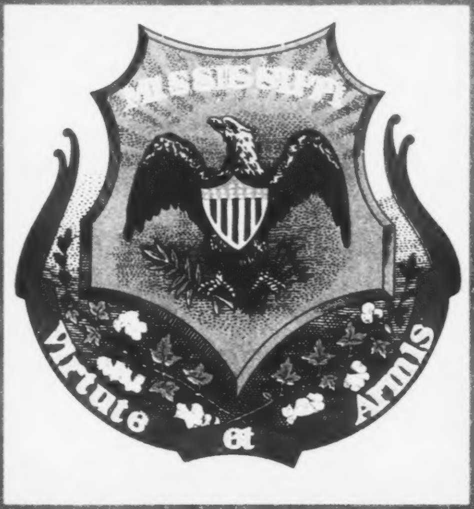
The State of Mississippi Emblems



THE COAT-OF-ARMS
Mississippi's official Coat-of-Arms was established by the Legislature in 1894. Inscribed upon the scroll is the State Motto — Virtute Et Armis — "By Valor and Arms."

THE STATE FLAG
This flag was designed in 1894 by a committee appointed by the Legislature. It incorporates the national colors — red, white and blue — and 13 stars for the original States of the Union.

THE STATE BIRD
MOCKINGBIRD
Found in all sections of Mississippi, the cheerful Mockingbird was selected as the official State Bird by the Women's Federated Clubs and by the State Legislature in 1944.

THE STATE FLOWER
AND TREE — MAGNOLIA
In 1900, the school children of Mississippi selected the Magnolia as the State Flower. In 1952 the Legislature, selected the Magnolia as the official State Tree.

THE MAGNOLIA STATE

D'Evereaux—Natchez

The State

Mississippi is like a soft breeze from the Gulf of Mexico. It is a land where tall pines stand in pristine beauty across a wide expanse of landscape and rich, black Delta soil, being turned to the plow, holds promise of bountiful harvest.

Nuclear submarines built by Mississippians course the seas of the globe and stand in the front line of the nation's defense. Rockets which powered the Apollo flights to the moon were test-fired on Mississippi soil. Chickens and soybeans from Mississippi producers help to feed the peoples in the Far East and Europe.

Mississippians still cherish their hallmarks of the Old South, the magnolias, moss laden trees and noble Greek-Revival mansions.

A transformation has been underway in Mississippi since the end of World War II, marked by a shift from the strong rural, agrarian influence to a more urban, business and industrial-oriented culture. Today Mississippians are ready to compete with any state for a share of the economic emoluments of the nation, and have set high standards of excellence in education, resource development and research.

Geography

Mississippi is a southeastern state bordered on the north by Tennessee, on the east by Alabama, on the south by the Gulf of Mexico and Louisiana, and on the west by the Mississippi River, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Topographically, the state is made up of two main land regions: the flat and fertile

Delta area along the Mississippi River in northwest Mississippi and the rolling hills which cover most other areas, though broken by occasional river valleys. The Bay of St. Louis and Biloxi or Back Bay, plus the Pascagoula and Pearl Rivers, break the coastline. A chain of small islands lie offshore, separated from the mainland by the Mississippi Sound.

Mississippi History

Mississippi is a state born of the American frontier, a place which was long the domain of the Indian until the Spanish and French voyageurs came in the 16th and 17th centuries and developed the New World. Hernando De Soto, with his gold-seeking, plundering Spanish conquistadors, came upon Mississippi soil in 1540, wandering across the wilderness for three years over lands which today comprise six southern states.

In April 1541, DeSoto and his men discovered the vast Mississippi River, which the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Natchez and Yazoo Indians had travelled long before.

A century and a half elapsed before a new breed of explorers, this time the French, began to make their mark on the history of this state Robert Cavelier, Sieur de La Salle began his slow, tedious exploration in 1680, and finally by March 1682, he set foot on Mississippi soil. He planted a cross and claimed the land for the King of France.

Then Pierre le Moyne, Sieur d'Iberville in 1699, with a French expeditionary fleet, sailed into the Gulf of Mexico, down the chain of islands off the Alabama and Mississippi coasts, and finally, on the eastern shore of Biloxi Bay, the adventurous Frenchman established the first permanent settlement in the entire Mississippi Valley.

Jean Baptiste le Moyne, Sieur de Bienville, the younger brother of Iberville, who had been part of the earlier expedition, came in 1716 to the bluffs overlying the Mississippi River where he founded Natchez as a French outpost of their coastal colony. Bienville became the governor of what was French Louisiana, which included the Mississippi territory, but by 1763, after the French and English had been at war, Louisiana was partitioned with the British taking over all of the territory east of the Mississippi River and Spain all west of the river.

This put Mississippi under a brief reign of British West Florida, but in 1779, the Spanish took over Natchez, and with it began the nine-year dominion of the Spanish.

Mississippi flew the flag of the United States for the first time in 1798 when it became a territory of a still young nation with the territorial capital at Natchez. Winthrop Sargent became the first governor. At that time, the state was bounded on the south by the 31st parallel, on the west by the Mississippi River, on the north by a line running eastward from the mouth of the Yazoo River and on the east by the Chattahoochie River.

In 1804 Congress extended the territory northward to the Tennessee line. Finally in 1817, the Mississippi territory was divided into the state of Mississippi and the Alabama Territory. Then on December 10, 1817, Mississippi became the 20th state of the Union. David Holmes, who had been territorial governor since 1809, became the first governor, and Natchez the capital.

After several moves the capital found its home in Jackson in 1822. Formerly known as LeFleur's Bluff overlooking the Pearl River, the site was designated by the legislature for the capital and given the name "Jackson" in honor of General Andrew Jackson.

The introduction of the improved Mexican variety of cotton into Mississippi around 1820 brought cotton into the forefront as the state's staple crop, and with the abundance of cheap land, high prices and easy credit, an economic boom was set off in the state in the 1830s. Thousands of immigrants, speculators, and farmers, moved into Mississippi and with the importation of slaves at the rate of 10,000 annually, the plantation system began to evolve.

The boom temporarily subsided when the financial panic struck in 1837, but again in the 1850s, after the swamplands of the Delta were drained and levees helped to control the Mississippi and Yazoo Rivers, a new wave of prosperity rose as the state entered the "Golden Age of the Cotton Kingdom."

By the end of the antebellum period, the agricultural economy of Mississippi was highly prosperous. Land values reached as much as $18 an acre for improved land.

When Civil War came, although supported by the agricultural interests, the state's farm economy would never regain that golden age.

Of the 78,000 Mississippians who went off to war in the Confederate service, more than 59,000 either died or were wounded. Many of the battles of the war were fought in the state, and the wealth and resources of Mississippians were sapped.

Vicksburg, the major goal of the Union forces to open the Mississippi River southward to the sea, fell on July 4, 1863, after 47 days of withering siege. At 10 a.m. on that fateful day, 19,500 Confederate soldiers wearily disgorged from the battlements and stacked arms. Gen. U. S. Grant raised the Stars and Stripes over the Warren County Courthouse.

The fate of the Confederacy had virtually been sealed by the fall of Vicksburg, but the last crushing blows did not fall until nearly two years later when the end came. The South and Mississippi were prostrate.

Mississippi was in economic ruin, and the future was bleak.

Uneasy days followed the war. Opportunists added to the turmoil. Military rule ended, however, in February 1870, after two years of occupation and Mississippi officially re-entered the Union.

Again Mississippi turned to cotton as the staple of its economy, and the recovery was less than robust. The sharecropper-tenant system grew out of the period because there was an abundance of land and large numbers of unemployed and unskilled workers, with little capital available. Towns and businesses were in a depressed mood, much as the agrarians, but somehow, at the end of the 1860s and into the 1870s, there came a fascination for building railroads. Still, only few miles were actually laid.

Timber — the millions of acres of virgin pine and hardwoods — became an easy prize for exploitation in the 1880s. Speculators came in with money and acquired huge holdings of timber lands in South Mississippi, and the sudden expansion of railroad lines into the state provided a ready-made industry of cutting and shipping lumber to northern markets.

Mississippi in the period from 1904 to 1915 became the nation's third timber-producing state, despite the heavily forested western states. The timber wealth, however, began to dissipate from the profligate lumbering and by the 1920s, the virgin forests had virtually been denuded, leaving behind a "cutover" land as ready victim for erosion.

As an agriculturally oriented state, public opinion was against large corporate ownerships of timber lands, and this grew into an almost hostile attitude toward development of any sizeable industrial plants in the first decade of the 20th century. Consequently, Mississippi was left behind, while many other states benefitted from the industrial revolution in the pre-World War I era. Eventually, the agrarian domination yielded to reality and Mississippi began its slow climb toward a stronger industrial base.

Cotton was selling at just over six cents a pound in the rich Delta country and as low as five cents a pound in the hills when the state was plunged into the 1930's Depression.

However, sound fiscal reforms were instituted by Gov. Martin Sennett Conner in 1932, which restored confidence in the state government and permitted the schools and institutions to operate. By 1936, the state had become receptive to the idea of revitalizing its economy, with industrial jobs, and elected a South Mississippi lumber man and industrialist, Hugh Lawson White of Columbia as governor.

White proposed the idea of having local governments issue public bonds to secure sites and erect industrial buildings for private enterprises. He called it a "Balance Agriculture With Industry" program.

The BAWI of Governor White was improved upon by succeeding state administrations, until finally in 1965 Mississippi's industrial employment exceeded its agricultural employment.

In recent years Mississippi has not only balanced agriculture with industry but has also combined the two fields. Smaller operations like processing plants for locally-grown crops are found throughout the state, as are lumber mills and agricultural experiment stations at Mississippi State University and other locations.

Industries in non-agriculture related fields have come to Mississippi, too, since Governor White decided to Balance Agriculture With Industry. Plants and factories dot the state, producing everything from clothes to electrical products.

A major accomplishment of the program was the addition of Ingalls Shipbuilding, a division of Litton Industries, to Pascagoula in 1938. Ingalls is now a prime defense contractor for all types of Navy combat ships as well as for the overhauling and refueling of nuclear powered submarines.

Also on the Gulf Coast, near Bay St. Louis, is the National Space Technology Laboratory, incorporating agencies in several fields from space exploration to ocean development. Originally used to test the rocket boosters that put the first American on the moon, the center is currently being utilized by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to develop and test space shuttle engines. The Navy has several oceanographic research centers at the base.

With a carefully planned program for development, supported by new laws and aggressive leadership, Mississippi is continuing to strive for optimum balance between agriculture and industry.

The Land

Mississippi is the geographic and weighted center of South Central U.S.A. — this area contains over 33,000,000 people. Mississippi is closer to the U. S. population center than Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cleveland, Baltimore or New York.

Mississippi's entire western boundary is the Mississippi River, along which are four excellent river ports. Louisiana and Arkansas border the state on the west, Tennessee on the north, Alabama on the east and the Gulf of Mexico and Louisiana border the State on the south.

The greater part of the State is a rolling-to-hilly portion of the coastal plain, rising from the Gulf Coast to the north and west. From sea level, on the Gulf Coast, elevation reaches a height of 806 feet above sea level, in North Mississippi. Most of the area is 100 feet to 500 feet above sea level. Mississippi's total area is 47,716 square miles — there are 47,358 square miles of land area and 358 square miles of water area.

Soil Types

The state is broken into ten regions of soil types. Most pronounced is the rich black soil in the alluvial plain of the Delta which stretches like an ellipse along the northwestern part of the state, a length of 200 miles, averaging 65 miles in width.

Skirting the eastern margin of the Delta with most significant deposits at the bottom of the ellipse are the Loess Hills. The rugged Tennessee Hills across the northeastern part of the state have an average altitude of 650 feet above sea level. Below these higher hills is a crescent of low-lying prairie land called the Black Prairie. The Pontotoc Ridge, wedge-shaped, extends for about 150 miles along the western border of the prairie, while a narrow band of Flatwoods sweeps in an open crescent around the western and southern margin of the Black Prairie and the Pontotoc Ridge.

The North Central Hills embrace that part of North Central Mississippi between the Flatwoods on the east and the Bluffs overlooking the Delta. Directly south is the Jackson Prairie Belt, a district of rolling land with interspersed prairies.

The entire Southern half of Mississippi south of the Jackson Prairie until reaching the Gulf Coastal Plain is the longleaf pine belt, called the Piney Woods. The soil is red and yellow sand loam. From five to fifteen miles in width stretching north from the Gulf of Mexico are the Coastal Plain Meadows.

Through the heartland of Mississippi from the Tennessee line stretches the largest single soil type, the Brown loam belt.

The Pontotoc Ridge divides the two river systems which drain the state, one to the east into the Alabama River, and the other to the west into the Mississippi River. Such names as Tallahatchie.

Yalobusha, Yocona, Skuna, Coldwater, Big Flower and Little Flower are rivers which empty into the Yazoo and then into the Mississippi. The Tennessee and the Tombigbee drain the northeastern part of the state into the Alabama River. The Leaf and Chickasawhay in the southeast become the Pascagoula River near the coast and empty into Pascagoula Bay. In the southwest, the Big Black and the Homochitto reach the Mississippi. The Pearl, with headwaters from the Yokahockany and the Strong and the Bogue Chitto, spills into the Gulf of Mexico.

Education

Mississippi pioneered in the Junior College movement in the 1920's and 1930's, placing vocational training and post-secondary study within reach of thousands of farm girls and boys. The state's first broad public school system had been established under the Constitution of 1869, which marked a trend away from the emphasis placed on academies of the pre-Civil War era. There was opposition to the public schools during the Reconstruction period, but by the 1880's, public education brought an enrollment of around 300,000 children and was generally accepted.

Even during lean times of the state in the 1930's, Mississippi struggled to provide the most adequate schools within a limited tax base. The late 1960's and 1970's have seen a greater share of the state's tax resources being put into education than other functions of state government, as the state moved toward higher standards of excellence in its schools and colleges.

The University of Mississippi was established by the legislature in 1840, and the institution was incorporated in 1844. A law school at the University was authorized in 1854. Alcorn College was established in 1871 as the first land-grant, state supported college for Negroes in the nation. Mississippi State University (then Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College) was also chartered as a land-grant institution in 1878.

There are eight state supported institutions of higher learning in Mississippi. These are: Alcorn State University, Lorman; Delta State University, Cleveland; Jackson State University, Jackson; Mississippi State University, Mississippi State; University of Mississippi, Oxford; University of Southern Mississippi, Hattiesburg; Mississippi University for Women, Columbus; Mississippi Valley State University, Itta Bena.

There are 16 public Junior Colleges. During the 1978-1979 school year, there were 493,710 elementary and secondary-age students enrolled in 152 public school districts throughout the state. Classroom teachers numbered 25,707, with approximately thirty-five percent of these having a Masters Degree, or better. There are 840 Attendance Centers in the State.

Arts

It may have been Faulkner's fictional Yoknapatawpha County or Welty's whimsical Southern characters that brought national fame to Mississippi. But it is the growing enthusiasm for the arts on every level — from dance and music to theatre and visual arts — that has continued to make the arts a part of everyday life in Mississippi.

Acclaim came early to the state for its contibutions to the literary world. William Faulkner, drawing on his experiences from life in Mississippi, went on to claim the Nobel Prize for literature in 1950 and became recognized worldwide as one of the leading 20th-century authors.

Jackson's Eudora Welty has consistently claimed high awards for her fiction, including the prestigious Pulitzer Prize in 1973 for her work, "The Optimist's Daughter."

Others — including playwright Tennessee Williams, author William Alexander Percy and singer Leontyne Price — have all built notable careers from their Mississippi heritage.

The basis of today's arts community, however, rests not in the individual, but in the coordinated efforts of a multi-faceted, multi-racial constituency. The coordination and support is provided by such statewide organizations as the Mississippi Arts Commission, a state agency, and the Friends of the Arts in Mississippi Inc., a private, non-profit organization involving arts leaders and supporters from around the state.

The enthusiasm and creative talent, on the other hand, is provided by the little theatre groups, the ballet companies, the craftsmen's guilds and the arts councils, operating in every corner of the state.

Professionals and amateurs combine forces in all facets of the arts, providing residents of the state with a wide choice of artistic entertainment. The state now offers three opera groups; five symphonies; one professional theatre and 33 community theatres; six dance companies, including one professional company, five art museums, including one statewide museum with an extensive exhibition and education program; and 28 local arts councils.

Major events such as the Delta Blues Festival in Freedom Village, the Choctaw Indian Fair in Philadelphia and the two major crafts festivals sponsored by the Craftsmen's Guild of Mississippi have become more than one-day activities; they have become traditions.

Mississippi was chosen over the traditional arts centers of New York and California when it came time for the International Ballet Competition in June 1979 and for major filming projects by national and international studios. The state has continued to host such artistic greats as Mikhail Baryshnikov, the Kozlovs and Van Cliburn.

Climate

One of Mississippi's attractive built-in assets is a generally warm and pleasant climate. The mean July temperature of 82 degrees varies little across the State. Average January readings range from 53 degrees on the Gulf Coast to 43 degrees across the northernmost parts of the State.

Average annual rainfall is 53 inches, with most precipitation occurring during the winter months. Heavy snowfalls occur occasionally in the northern counties, but snowfalls in the rest of the State are rare and usually never of consequence.

Agriculture

Mississippi's climate, combined with fertile land, makes agriculture Mississippi's largest industry.

Total cash receipts from farm marketings in 1978 were $1,998,548,000, an increase of 18 percent over 1977. Mississippi has a well diversified agricultural program. In 1978, livestock and livestock products accounted for 45 percent of our cash income from agriculture, while crops contributed 55 percent. Soybeans are the leading source of farm income, and in 1978, the state ranked eighth in the nation in total cash receipts. The production of cotton is the second most important farm enterprise from the standpoint of cash farm income, followed by cattle and calves, commercial broiler production, dairy products, egg production and rice. Hogs, vegetables, wheat, hay, sorghum grain, pecans, corn, peaches and forest products are also important sources of income for many of Mississippi's farmers.

Mississippi ranks third, following Texas and California, in income from sales of cotton, fifth in commercial broilers, eighth in soybeans, fifth in income from livestock and seventeenth in income from crops.

Forests

The forests of Mississippi occupy 16.7 million acres-approximately 55 percent of the State's total area. Employment in the wood and related industries was at a high point in 1979 with the equivalent of about 75,000 full time jobs provided. Forestry receipts for calendar year 1979 reached $586,000,000 in raw material income for land owners, trailing only soybeans. Timber-based economic activities alone, not counting substantial forest values in recreation, wildlife, grazing, aesthetics and water storage, generated nearly three billion dollars in total spending in the late 1970's. At the end of calendar year 1979, Mississippi remained the number one tree farming state in the Nation with 5,124 certified tree farms covering 3,977,709 acres.

Fisheries

The State of Mississippi has an abundance of excellent fresh water fishing in ponds, reservoirs and lakes scattered throughout the state. A large variety of fish, including the largemouth bass, crappie, bluegill and channel catfish are to be found in its many streams and lakes. Commercial catfish farming, a relatively new agribusiness, is centered in the lower Mississippi River Valley. Mississippi is the leading producer of farm-raised catfish with approximately 25,000 acres in production.

Mineral Resources

Mineral deposits in Mississippi include a wealth of clays, marl, cement rock, sandstone, bentonite, hydrated limestone and fuller's earth. Natural gas was discovered near Amory in 1926. Since then, many other fields have been discovered, making Mississippi one of the largest natural gas areas in the nation. Oil was discovered in 1939 in the Tinsley Field in Yazoo County. There are 662 oil reservoirs, 161 gas pools, 419 producing oil and gas fields with 3400 oil and gas wells. Exploration and discovery continue almost daily.

Department of Archives and History

Elbert R. Hilliard, Director

The Mississippi Department of Archives and History, the second oldest Department of its kind in the United States, was established in 1902 to collect, preserve and make available materials bearing upon the history of the state from the earliest times to the present. The Department has expanded its services through the years and is now the central clearing house for historical activities in Mississippi.

The Department of Archives and History is supported primarily by legislative appropriation and is governed by an independent board of nine trustees. Department programs are directed through four divisions: Archives and Library, the State Historical Museum in the old Capitol Restoration, Information and Education, and Historic Preservation. The Department also administers the Manship House Restoration in Jackson, the Grand Village of the Natchez Indians in Natchez, and Historic Jefferson College at Washington, Mississippi. In addition, the Department holds title to the Windsor Ruins in Claiborne County and other undeveloped archaeological and historical properties throughout the state.

The Department staff includes the director, four division directors, archaeologists, architectural historians, archivists, curators, editors, librarians, and other specialized personnel, as well as clerical, fiscal, and technical assistants.

The Department's archival collections and historical reference library are housed in the handsome Archives and History Building, completed in 1971, south of the Old Capitol on the historic Capitol Green. The collections include provincial, territorial, and state archives of Mississippi; issues in the original or on microfilm from hundreds of Mississippi newspapers published from 1801 to the present; manuscript and microfilm copies of Mississippi census records from the Spanish census of 1792 through the United States census of 1900; approximately 45 cubic feet of military records of Mississippians who served in the Confederate armed forces; more than 1,700 private manuscript collections including diaries, account books, journals, letters, and literary manuscripts; approximately 6,800 cubic feet of official state records; and in excess of 7,500 rolls of county records microfilm.

The library of the Department of Archives and History is a special collections library which attempts to acquire all of the books or articles written about Mississippi or by Mississippi writers. The library, which houses the state's largest collection of genealogical materials, contains more than 35,000 volumes. Scholars, genealogists, professional men and women, students, writers, and other researchers from all over the world use the Department's collections.

The State Historical Museum in the Old Capitol Restoration collects, preserves, and exhibits artifacts which tell the story of Mississippi from prehistoric times through territorial days, statehood and war, to the present. Portraits of illustrious Mississippians of the past, honored by election to the Mississippi Hall of Fame, are hung throughout the restoration areas of the Old Capitol.

The Department of Archives and History, in conjunction with the Mississippi Historical Society, publishes The Journal of Mississippi History. The production of all books and volumes published by the Department and the Mississippi Historical Society is supervised by the Department's Information and Education division, which also produces The Mississippi History Newsletter.

The Historic Preservation division, which is housed in the Protective Service Life Insurance Building on Amite Street, is responsible for administering the state's participation in the National Historic Preservation program and the laws of the state dealing with the protection of antiquities.

CONFEDERATE MONUMENT

The monument to the Confederate Dead of Mississippi is located on the Capitol Green in front of the Archives and History Building. It was dedicated on June 3, 1891—the birthday of Jefferson Davis—and was unveiled by Jefferson Davis Hayes, the grandson of the Confederate President.

The monument, on three platform stone bases built of white limestone from Kentucky, was paid for by public subscription through the Confererate Monument Association of Mississippi and a $10,000 appropriation by the 1890 Mississippi Legislature.

A statue of a Confederate soldier made of Italian marble stands atop the spire of the monument. The statue of Jefferson Davis which presently stands in the Old Capitol Restoration originally was located within the Confederate Monument.

LIBERTY BELL REPLICA

A replica of the original Liberty Bell in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania which was given to the state by Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, July 4, 1950, is placed at the center of the walkway on the south entrance to the Capitol.

The bell was loaned in 1975 by the state to the Southern Baptist Convention, which coordinated its exhibition in 22 states during the bicentennial. The bell was returned to the New Capitol grounds on July 6, 1976.

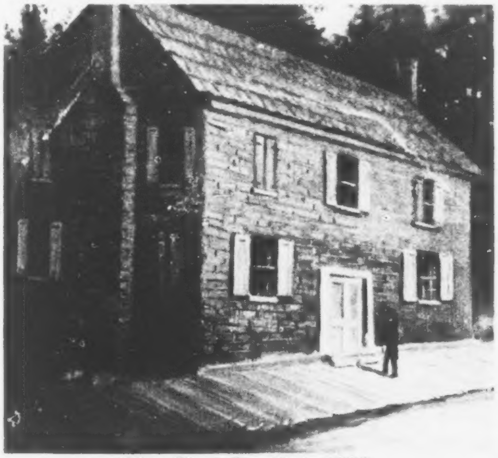
FIGUREHEAD OF BATTLESHIP MISSISSIPPI

The bronze figurehead from the second Battleship Mississippi (BB 23) was placed on the Capitol lawn in 1909, six years after the Capitol was completed and six months after the ship visited Mississippi's Gulf Coast. Governor Edmond Noel, who had presented a $6,000 silver service to the ship's wardroom, asked the Navy to lend the figurehead to the state for exhibition purposes. When the old battleship was sold to Greece in 1914, the figurehead remained on the Capitol lawn and was mounted in its present concrete base in the shape of the ship's bow. A third USS Mississippi was commissioned in 1917, but the figurehead was not requested by the Navy because of the new styling of naval war vessels.

OLD CAPITOL

The handsome Greek Revival building known as the Old Capitol, which stands at the head of Jackson's Capitol Street and houses the State Historical Museum, was the second capitol building constructed in Jackson. The first capitol was a small two-story brick building, at the corner of Capitol and President Streets, built in 1822 when the Legislature, meeting in Columbia, designated a new seat of government near the then "true centre of the state," to be named in honor of Andrew Jackson.

The growing state soon outgrew the little frontier capitol building, and in 1833 a new capitol was planned by the Legislature. Construction was begun in 1833, but there were difficulties with the architect and some of the materials proved defective.



The First Capitol, 1822

The work was halted; some of it was torn down; a new architect, William Nichols, was employed, and the Capitol was not completed until 1840, though the Legislature first met in the unfinished building in 1839. The cost of construction amounted to approximately $400,000.

Old Capitol and State Museum

Many historic events occurred in the Capitol. Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay, and Jefferson Davis visited there, and made important speeches. In the House of Representatives on January 9, 1861, Mississippi became an independent republic and the second state to secede. In 1890 the Constitution, under which Mississippi is still governed, was adopted there.

The Capitol served as the seat of state government until 1903, when the New Capitol was completed and state offices were removed from the Old Capitol building.

The Old Capitol was virtually abandoned from 1903 to 1916, when a decision was made to renovate it for use as a state office building.

Under the administration of Governor J. P. Coleman, a major restoration of the Old Capitol was undertaken under the direction of the Department of Archives and History to make it into a state museum and a showplace for Mississippi History.

Governor Coleman made the Old Capitol restoration a top priority item in his building program, and on Feb. 6, 1959, work on the project was begun by the State Building Commission.

The Old Capitol Restoration, a division of the State Department of Archives and History, was dedicated on June 3, 1961. The cost of the restoration was approximately 2 million dollars.

The Old Capitol is the main showpiece of the State Museum, with its graceful semi-circular stairs and the faithfully reconstructed legislative halls. Dioramas and exhibits depicting the story of Mississippi's history are arranged throughout the building.

THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION

The Mansion, occupied by the Governor during his tenure, is on the main business street of Jackson, Capitol Street. It occupies a complete block with a tree-studded lawn.

The Mansion was authorized at the 1833 session of the Legislature and an initial appropriation of $10,000 appropriated for its construction. However, additional funds were made available before it was completed in 1842, at a cost of approximately $61,000.

During the Civil War the Mansion was used as a hospital, and was the scene of a victory dinner given by General Sherman after the fall of Vicksburg.

Because of the historical significance and classic architectural design of the building, the Mansion has been designated a National Historic Landmark by the U.S. Department of the Interior. It is one of only two mansions in the nation to receive this distinction.

In 1972, a 2.7 million dollar restoration and renovation was undertaken and during the next three years the historical portion of the Mansion was restored to its original plan. Under the leadership of Mrs. William L. Waller this effort produced not only a beautiful residence for Mississippi's First Families, but also preserved one of the most historically significant buildings in the nation.

THE STATE MOTTO

The State motto of Mississippi, Virtute et Armis, meaning by valor and arms, was suggested by the Honorable James Rhea Preston, a native of Virginia, who was at the time Superintendent of Education in the State of Mississippi.

PLEDGE TO THE STATE FLAG

"I salute the flag of Mississippi and the sovereign state for which it stands with pride in her history and achievements and with confidence in her future under the guidance of Almighty God."

Ref. Section 37-13-7,
Mississippi Code of 1972.

THE GREAT SEAL OF MISSISSIPPI

The present State Seal has been in use since Mississippi became a state in 1817. It is described in the Laws of the State of Mississippi, First Session, First General Assembly, 1817-1818, as follows: "The seal of this state, the inscription of which shall be 'the great seal of the State of Mississippi,' around the margin, and in the center an eagle, with the olive branch and quiver of arrows in his claws."

STATE FLAG OF MISSISSIPPI

Adoption of Mississippi State Flag

The committee to design a State Flag and Coat-of-Arms was appointed by legislative action February 7, 1894, and provided that the flag reported by the committee should become the official flag. The committee recommended for the flag "one with width two-thirds of its length; with the union square, in width two-thirds of the width of the flag; the ground of the union to be red and a broad blue saltier thereon, bordered with white and emblazoned with thirteen (13) mullets or five-pointed stars, corresponding with the number of the original States of the Union; the field to be divided into three bars of equal width, the upper one blue, the center one white, and the lower one extending the whole length of the flag, red—the national colors; the staff surmounted with a spear-head and a battle-axe below; the flag to be fringed with gold, and the staff gilded with gold." The canton corner of the flag is a replica of the Confederate Battle Flag.

THE STATE CAPITOL

The imposing structure which serves as the State Capitol of Mississippi—still called by many the New Capitol—was completed in 1903 at a cost of $1,093,641. It was erected on what had been the site of the state penitentiary to replace the old capitol, which was found to be inadequate for a growing state government.

For years the State Capitol housed the two chambers of the State Legislature, the offices of the Governor, the Supreme Court, the Attorney General, the Secretary of State, the State Auditor and the State Treasurer.

The offices of the State Auditor and State Treasurer were removed to the twenty-story Walter Sillers State Office Building following its completion in late 1972. The Governor's office is also located in this building. The Supreme Court Chambers and the offices of the Attorney General were moved to the new Carroll Gartin Justice Building in 1973. The Secretary of State's offices are now housed in the new Heber Ladner Building, directly south of the New Capitol.

At the time of its completion, the New Capitol, which is included in the National Register of Historical Places, was considered the most beautiful and prominent public building in the South. The capitol, designed by architect Theodore C. Link of St. Louis, is a prime example of the Beaux Arts style, which dominated architectural design from 1890-1920.

The exterior walls of the capitol are of Bedford limestone and the base course is of Georgia granite. The main vestibule is built entirely of Blue Vermont marble on a base of Black Belgian. Italian marble, trimmed with jet black marble from New York State, is found in the main rotunda along with friezes and columns of scagliola.

A massive dome elaborately decorated in pastels and gold leaf rises on four piers from the second floor to a height of 180 feet above ground level.

Floors of the expansive corridors and lobbies are of marble mosaic. Maple, oak, walnut and mahogany woods are used throughout the building.

The eagle atop the dome is made of copper, coated with gold leaf. It spreads 15 feet from one wingtip to the other and stands eight feet high.

The first major renovation of the capitol was authorized by the 1973 Mississippi Legislature. Work began in 1979 and it is projected that the renovation project, which is designed to preserve the original beauty of the building while making it more functional for use by the Legislature, will be completed in time for the capitol to be occupied by the 1983 Legislature.

During the renovation project, Central High School, purchased from the City of Jackson on December 4, 1978, has been used as a temporary location for the Legislature. After renovation of the New Capitol is completed, Central High School will be converted into state offices.

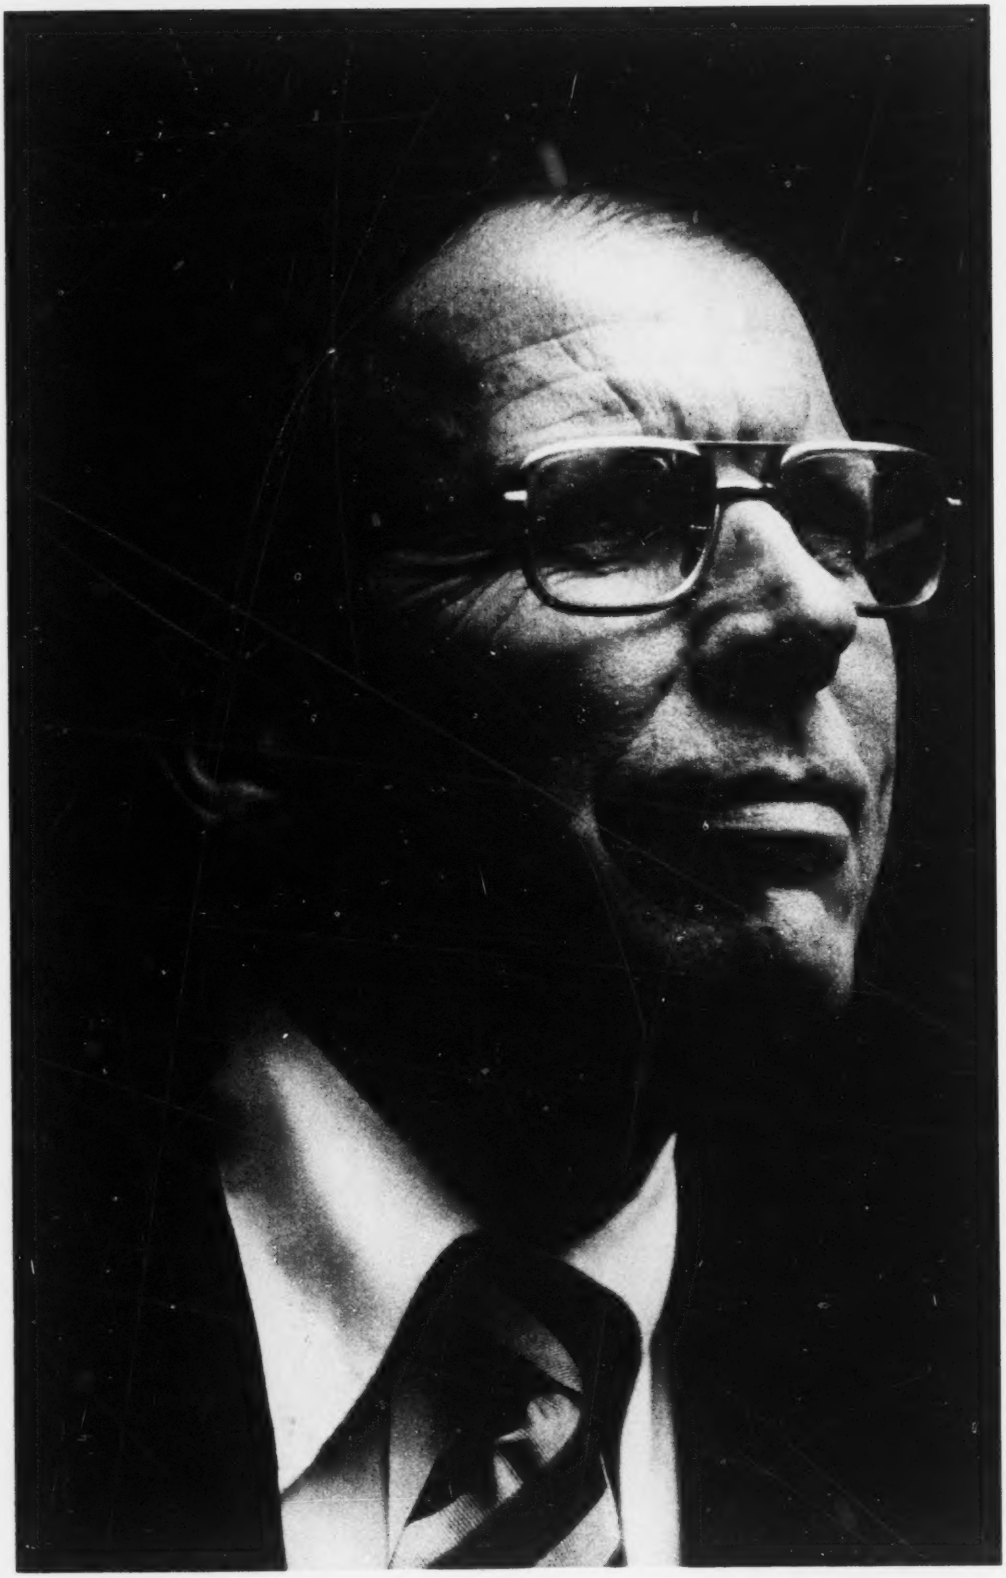
STATE GOVERNMENT

THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

- Elected State Officials
- Legislature
- Judiciary
- Boards, Commissions



William Forrest Winter
Governor
1980-1984

William Forrest Winter was born in Grenada County, Mississippi, on February 21, 1923. Governor Winter graduated from the University of Mississippi in 1943 with a B.A. in history. After serving with the U.S. Army Infantry in the Philippines, he entered the University of Mississippi Law School, graduating first in his class in 1949. While still a law student he was elected to the State Legislature and served in that position for eight years. The Governor re-entered the infantry during the Korean Conflict. During his tenure in the armed services he advanced from the rank of private to major.

Governor Winter first served in statewide office as State Tax Collector. He held that position from 1956-64 at which time the office was abolished at his request. In 1963 he has elected State Treasurer, and, after an unsuccessful bid for Governor in 1967, he was elected Lieutenant Governor in 1971. As Lieutenant Governor, Winter was an outspoken advocate of opening the process of government to the public and the press. For his leadership in this area he was awarded the Margaret Dixon Freedom of Information Award by the Mississippi-Louisiana Associated Press Association. In 1975 Governor Winter made his second unsuccessful bid for the governorship. He then returned full-time to the practice of law before mounting a successful bid for the office of Governor in 1979.

Governor Winter has been president of the Mississippi Association for Mental Health and vice president of the National Association of Mental Health. He is president of the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, a trustee of Belhaven College and Columbia Seminary, a trustee of the Mississippi Foundation of Independent Colleges, and an elder in the Presbyterian Church. The Governor is a former president of the Mississippi Historical Society and the Ole Miss Alumni Association.

An attorney, farmer and timber grower, Governor Winter is a member of ODK and Phi Delta Phi. He was named Outstanding Alumnus of the University of Mississippi in 1975. He is married to the former Elise Varner and they have three daughters.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Public education

THE STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

The State Board of Education is a constitutional body composed of three ex officio members: the State Superintendent of Public Education, chairman; the Attorney General; and the Secretary of State. They serve during their four-year terms in office but receive no remuneration as members of the State Board of Education.

The board adopts the course of study to be used in the public schools of the state and regulates all matters arising in the practical administration of the school system not otherwise provided for.

THE CHIEF STATE SCHOOL OFFICER

The chief state school officer is the State Superintendent of Public Education. He is elected by popular vote for a term of four years and is eligible to succeed himself. His duties include: presiding over the State Board of Education, supervising in a general way the public free schools of the state and prescribing such rules and regulations as he deems necessary for the best educational interests of the state not otherwise provided for, advising county superintendents upon all matters involving the welfare of schools, receiving detailed reports on the educational business of the schools of the state, approving all school budgets, organizing a State Department of Education, and supervising the work thereof.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Approximately one of every four persons over Mississippi is directly affected by what happens in the public elementary and secondary schools and junior colleges over Mississippi. Serving all these schools is the Mississippi State Department of Education (MSDE).

The main job of every employee in the MSDE is to render service to schools and to the people of Mississippi.

Specialists in a wide variety of fields are employed by the MSDE. These specialists, all of whom have advanced degrees and years of experience in education, work with administrators and teachers in the state's 153 school districts.

They help school officials solve problems, launch new programs, and plan for the wisest possible use of federal, state, and local funds.

They serve on curriculum committees and plan and conduct workshops and conferences. These workshops, ranging from topics such as drug abuse to helping emotionally disturbed children, all have one purpose—to improve the quality of public education.

ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE DIVISION

Public schools are big business. During 1978-79 some $709,000,000 was required to fund the state's public elementary and secondary schools. The state provided about 53% of this money. Local and federal sources furnished the remainder.

This division is charged with the legal responsibility for the following:

The apportionment of state funds as directed by the State Department of Education

Budgetary control

Educational and financial records, reports, and research

Fiscal and business management

Departmental bookkeeping

The division includes the following departments: school finance and statistics, accounting, duplicating and mailing services, data processing, and school food services.

This division is charged with responsibilities in four major areas, as follows: regulatory services, instructional services, federal and state programs, and special education.

Regulatory services are carried out through the offices of school accreditation and teacher certification.

Instructional services — involving curriculum development and improvement— are carried out by the division's supervisor and consultants.

The leadership function of the MSDE is most evident in the area of consultative services. Through workshops, newsletters, and personal contacts in local schools, MSDE consultants and supervisors provide dynamic leadership in their respective disciplines.

DIVISION OF INSTRUCTION

Improving the quality of education in Mississippi by providing leadership, supervision, and technical assistance for elementary and secondary schools is the thrust of the Division of Instruction.

This division is responsible for elementary and secondary education, accreditation of schools, certification of teachers, and educational accountability. Additional responsibilities include special education, adult education, basic skills education, and Title IV of ESEA.

Through ten learning resources centers the division provides numerous special education services to local school districts. Great effort is being made to provide appropriate services to all handicapped children.

DIVISION OF SCHOOL BUILDING AND TRANSPORTATION

Services are provided by this division in three areas, as follows: School Building Service, Pupil Transportation including the supervision of school bus purchases in accordance with rules and regulations set by State Board of Education, and Driver and Safety Education.

School Building Service—There were approximately 1,758 publicly owned school buildings in use at the beginning of the 1979-80 school year with new building pupil capacity 11,899.

During 1979-80 some $27,319,696.55 of state funds were approved for 157 building projects which consisted of new construction, renovation, and repairs

Pupil Transportation — Mississippi's approximately 5,500 school buses travel more than 38,000,000 miles each year.

The safety of the nearly 370,000 students who ride buses daily is a primary concern of department officials. Greater emphasis is being placed on pupil safety, school bus inspection, and preventive maintenance. Approximately 8,000 bus drivers are trained each summer by professional instructors approved and supervised by the department.

Department assistance is also provided to schools in planning bus routes, purchasing buses and other equipment, recruiting and selecting drivers, and in other areas.

Driver and Safety Education — The driver and safety education section is responsible for administration and supervision of the statewide driver education program as provided by law. Duties involve approval of all programs, scheduling state-owned simulators and visiting instructors while equipment is on location, developing and administering federal projects, certification and distribution of state appropriated funds, consultant services, and program visitation. During 1979-80, there were some 330 approved programs involving approximately 30,000 students.

DIVISION OF VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION

The Vocational Rehabilitation Division rebuilds lives of disabled adults and young people of working age by preparing them for earning a living.

Vocational rehabilitation is a state-federal program which provides a series of services designed to restore disabled persons physically and emotionally, to train them, and place them in jobs.

During fiscal 1979, 5,826 disabled men and women achieved independence through the vocational rehabilitation program. The division served 24,967 disabled persons.

The rebuilding of lives is the primary goal of the division. There are, however, many additional benefits resulting from the division program.

For instance, annual earnings of the 5,826 rehabilitants rose sharply from $10,263,500 before rehabilitation to $31,758,896 after rehabilitation — or more than three times.

Many of those rehabilitated became taxpayers for the first time. Records show that for every dollar expended on rehabilitation, those rehabilitated return seven dollars to the economy in state and federal taxes.

The division has offices located in 64 cities and towns in the state. The general program is broadened and enriched through a series of special programs and projects.

MANY SERVICES

Available services include the following: counseling and guidance, evaluation (medical, social, psychological, vocational), physical and mental restoration, job training, physical aids (braces, artificial limbs, etc.), job placement and follow-up counseling.

In some cases, the division will pay room, board and travel expenses for persons receiving rehabilitation services. The division will even, if necessary, buy a client the tools and licenses he may need to get started on a job.

Secondary education student

The entire program is concerned with improving the condition of the disabled person to the highest degree possible and placing him in a job.

In addition to the divisions already listed, the following units report directly to the office of the State Superintendent of Education:

TITLE 1 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act—This is a program for strengthening learning opportunities for educational disadvantaged children.

Planning and Evaluation—This unit carries out research and evaluation projects for both the State Department of Education and local school districts.

Public Relations—This unit coordinates the preparation and release of information relative to educational programs.

Technical Services Division—This unit offers to school districts a program of staff development for teachers and administrators.

Personnel Office—This unit accepts all applications for employment and maintains personnel records on all department employees.

Career Education—This unit was created by legislative mandate to develop and implement a program of career education in all public school districts in the state.

Proprietary School and College Registration—This commission, with an executive secretary, has a responsibility for licensing proprietary schools which make application to operate in the State of Mississippi.

DIVISION OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Meeting the vocational training needs of the people of Mississippi continues to be the mission of the Vocational Division. These needs are being met by providing training for better jobs, attracting industry, and offering vocational programs more closely related to job markets.

In fiscal year 1980, vocational education will train more than 180,000 secondary, post secondary and adult students in 28 post secondary vocational training sites, and 67 secondary area vocational schools. In addition other training will be offered with specialized funds designed to meet the needs of unemployed and underemployed adults in Mississippi.

Training will be offered in agriculture, distributive education, health, home economics, office occupations, technical occupations and trade and industrial occupations.

Student activities play a major role in developing leadership abilities of vocational students. During fiscal 1980 more than 30,000 students will be enrolled in one of the following:

Future Farmers of America (FFA)
Future Homemakers of America (FHA)
Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA)
Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA)
Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA)

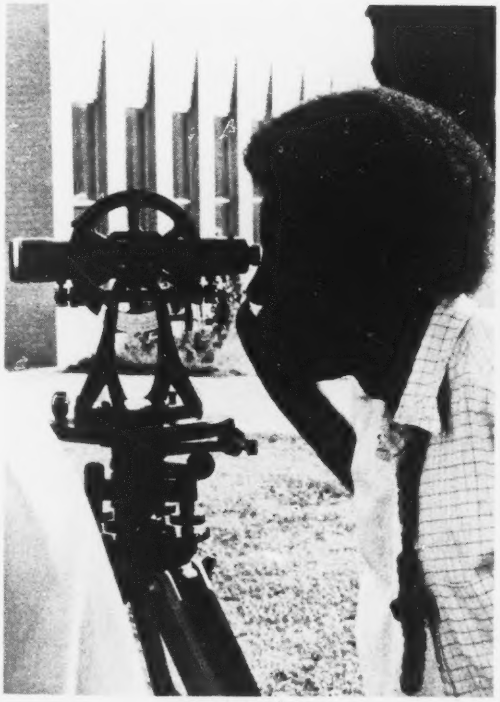
Assistance to Programs

The Vocational Education Division of the State Department of Education has responsibility for helping fund, administering, and supervising vocational and technical programs. The division also provides technical assistance to local schools in planning and conducting their training programs. Modern teaching equipment and well-trained teachers are constant concerns of the division.

Specialized Industrial Training

An expanded and highly specialized industrial training program has been established. Every program is customized to job needs of a specific industry. "Start-Up" training is provided for new industry, or to train new workers for expanding industry. Special programs are available or specific ones will be developed as needed, to assist with supervisory or production jobs. In all cases, training is keyed to matching Mississippi people with specific performance needs of the particular industry.

The industrial training program provides industry with highly productive workers and insures Mississippi people the opportunity for the jobs. Industrial training is carried out through cooperative efforts of local schools, the industry, state staff and other agencies interested in the economic development of the state.



Engineering

Public Junior College System

Sixteen public junior college districts of Mississippi comprise a state system of local institutions dedicated to offering educational and training opportunities to all the people of their districts and also to providing trained workers for business and industry of the districts and state.

All high school graduates of their districts are eligible for admission. Provisions are also made to accept those who have not graduated from high school into terminal vocational and technical programs.

PROVIDE FIRST TWO YEARS

The junior colleges provide the first two years of fully accredited college work transferable to the senior colleges and universities of the state and region. Terminal vocational and technical courses ranging in length from one or two weeks to those requiring two years to complete are also provided.

STATE-COUNTY PARTNERSHIP

The junior colleges are an integral part of post-secondary education available to the people of Mississippi on a local level. In 1980 there were eighteen comprehensive junior college campuses, and an additional twelve vocational-technical centers making a total of thirty junior college centers strategically located in all regions of the state.

Each school district is under the control of a local board of trustees which is selected locally and is a policy making body with its powers, duties, and responsibilities clearly defined in the basic junior college law.

The state exercises general supervision and coordination through the State Board of Education and the Junior College Commission. Each of these state agencies have clearly defined responsibilities which prevent conflict of action. The State Superintendent of

One of 16 original campuses

Education serves as chairman of both agencies.

State level administration is provided by the Division of Junior Colleges, State Department of Education, with a director who is appointed by and responsible to the State Superintendent of Education. The Director serves as Secretary to the Junior College Commission and the staff of the division provides professional, technical, and clerical services needed by the commission.

FINANCE

The local districts and the state have jointly accepted the responsibility of providing funds for the cost of operation of the junior colleges. The provision of funds for repair and improvement of buildings and construction of new buildings is also a joint responsibility when surveys and studies indicate such needs.

The appropriation of funds and the enactment of much needed legislation has been, to a great degree, the result of vigorous and aggressive action by the State Junior College Association. This organization is made up of presidents or their representatives of each junior college district of the state.

Legislative programs are carefully planned and agreed upon by each junior college president. A legislative committee is appointed to present the program to the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor, the Budget Commission, and all members of the Legislature.

State appropriations for buildings and repairs are made through the State Building Commission, with each junior college district being allocated a specific amount depending upon the number of full-time students enrolled.

The junior college budgets for the 1979-80 session showed that the operating funds are derived from the following sources: (1) student fees, 15%; (2) local districts, 17%; (3) state appropriation (direct and indirect), 61% and (4) federal, 7%.

Capital improvement funds are derived from three sources: (1) local districts, (2) federal, (3) state.

HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT

The public junior colleges of Mississippi have developed over the years into a joint responsibility of local districts and the state. This partnership of the state and local districts has evolved in response to the concern expressed by the people that administrative and operational control be retained at the local level while at the same time provisions are made to insure coordination and requirements of minimum standards for the educational program at the state level.

The junior colleges of Mississippi are an outgrowth of the county agricultural high schools which were authorized by the Legislature in 1908. Fifty-one of these schools were established between 1908 and 1919 to provide secondary education for the boys and girls of the rural areas.

The Mississippi Legislature in 1922 enacted legislation which provided that any county agricultural high school located not less than twenty miles from a state college could add the freshman and sophomore years of college work to their curricular offerings. This law also established minimum standards regarding faculty, libraries, and instructional programs for the operation of these institutions. No state appropriation was allowed to support such college work.

In the school year of 1922-23, freshman college work was first attempted in Mississippi by the county agricultural high schools of Pearl River and Hinds Counties with a combined enrollment of 43 students.

In 1928, the State Legislature brought forward the laws of 1922 and provided that counties may join together and tax themselves to establish a junior college with equal representation of the boards of trustees. The law also provided that other counties may join an existing junior college district, levy a tax to support it, and have representation on the board.

A typical satelite campus

CREATION OF DISTRICTS

In 1964, state legislation placed every county of the state in one of the existing thirteen junior college districts and three special overlapping districts. Prior to this time, a county had voluntarily become a part of a junior college district. This law also provided that new junior college districts could only be established by an act of the Legislature, but it did provide, with approval of the Junior College Commission, for the establishment of attendance centers within the legally constituted districts.

Currenty all counties in the state but one are levying a tax to support the junior college of the district in which the laws of 1964 placed them. The majority of counties also levy taxes for capital improvement.

JUNIOR COLLEGE COMMISSION

The law of 1928 also established the Junior College Commission as the state regulatory agency and as the controlling agency for the establishment of new junior colleges.

This act also deleted the provision of the 1922 law which prohibited state appropriations for the operation of junior colleges. As a result of this deletion, the Legislature appropriated $80,000 for the support of junior colleges for the biennium of 1928-30. Since the first appropriation, each succeeding Legislature, except that of 1932-34, has increased the appropriation. In the fall of 1928, eleven junior colleges were in operation with an enrollment of 633 freshmen and 245 sophomores.

The 1950 Legislature updated the existing junior college laws, validated the junior college districts previously enacted by the Junior College Commission, and provided methods of selection and terms of office for junior college trustees. This act also gave the Junior College Commission additional powers and authority to regulate junior colleges, particularly in establishing new junior colleges and setting up standards for participating in state funds. It also defined in detail duties of trustees and junior college administrators, authorized the transportation of students, and provided that local junior college districts could levy a maximum of three mills for operation and maintenance and three mills for capital improvement.

In 1962, the Legislature expanded the Junior College Commission to include three lay members in addition to the three university and college presidents and three junior college presidents. The State Superintendent of Education was retained as chairman, making a total of ten members. The powers of the commission were greatly increased, including the authority to allocate vocational-technical training functions based upon studies conducted by the commission.

STUDENT ENROLLMENTS

Since the initial enrollment of 43 students in 1922, there has been a consistent increase of enrollment in junior colleges in Mississippi with the exception of the World War II years. At the close of the war many veterans differing widely in background and preparation enrolled in junior colleges. Special programs were developed to assist those who needed refresher courses and foundation subjects.

Emphasis upon vocational and technical education in 1964 by the federal and state governments resulted in increased number of programs and students in terminal education. The most recent acceleration of enrollments has been in the number of people pursuing part-time studies and continuing education.

Enrollment trends for the past four year period are as follows:

ENROLLMENTS

	Fall Full-Time	Total Enrollment
1979-80	23,929	47,928
1978-79	22,642	44,954
1977-78	23,174	45,788
1976-77	23,366	46,810

STUDENT COST

The junior colleges of Mississippi operate on the philosophy that financial cost should not prevent any deserving student from attending.

The cost of attending a junior college differs from school to school. The fee for a Mississippi resident commuting to a junior college ranges between $135.00-185.00 per semester. Other fees are small and restricted to special classes. Books and supplies may cost from $150.00 to $170.00 per year.

Twelve of the districts operate buses with little or no cost to the students. Modern dormitories are maintained on fourteen campuses, and room and meals usually cost from $85.00 to $130.00 per month for the student residing on the junior college campus.

The junior colleges strive to keep the cost of education as low as possible, but they recognize that many students need financial assistance. Each junior college has a program of financial aid for the student which may include part-time work, loans, grants, and scholarships.

Jackson State University

Institutions of Higher Learning

Statewide College Scope

Eight public senior universities are extant in Mississippi and are all administered by the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning. The range of the state higher educational system, however, goes on to include sixteen public junior colleges, eight private senior colleges, five private junior colleges, six four-year Bible colleges, and two graduate-level theological seminaries. Additionally, the Mississippi Research and Development Center in Jackson and the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs work in cooperation with the colleges and universities to expand and strengthen their research programs aimed at total resource development.

Alcorn State University

Alcorn State University has the proud distinction of being the oldest predominantly Negro land-grant college in the United States. Ironically, it had its beginning in 1830 as Oakland College and was intended for the education of white male students. The ravages of the Civil War, however, caused its closure, and it was not until 1871 that classwork resumed. It was then, too, that the school became Alcorn University, named for Governor James Alcorn.

In 1878, under provisions of the Morrill Act, the Mississippi Legislature changed its name to Alcorn A & M College and then changed it again in 1974 to Alcorn State University. In May, 1972, Alcorn held its 100th graduation exercise, commemorating 100 years of service and educational advancement.

Alcorn offers undergraduate studies in four divisions: the Division of Arts and Sciences, the Division of Business and Economics, the Division of Education and Psychology, and the Division of Agriculture and Applied Sciences. A Division of Graduate Studies has been added, and a Master of Science degree in Education is offered. Alcorn now operates a School of Nursing located at Natchez which conducts an associate degree program and a baccalaureate program.

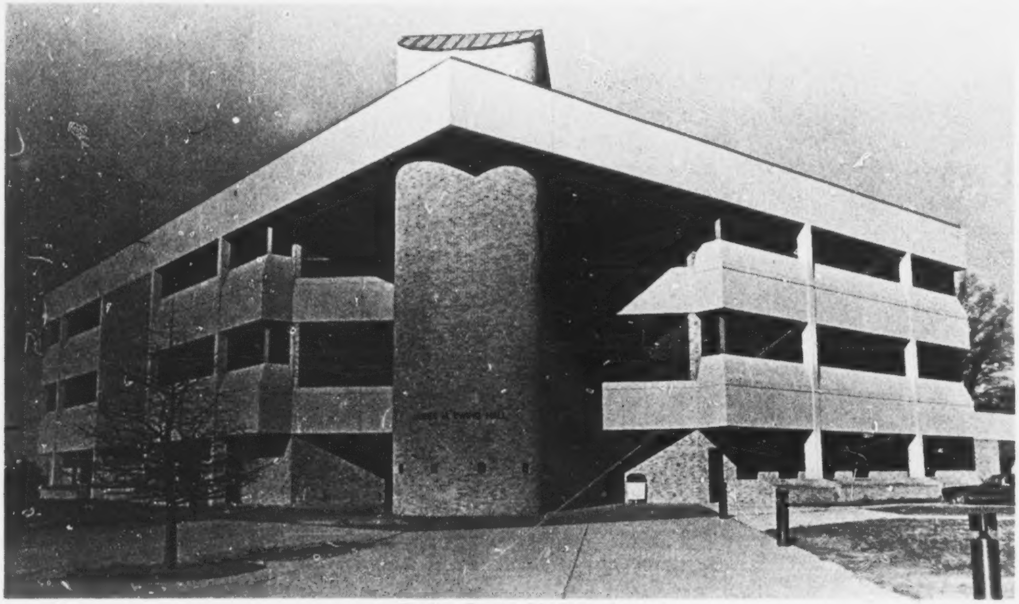
The teaching program is strengthened by functional research and extension programs. Not only does Alcorn work cooperatively with Mississippi State University at the Agricultural Experiment Station which is located at Alcorn, but Alcorn also offers extension courses at Natchez other than the nursing courses.

Delta State University

In 1924, the Mississippi Legislature established Delta State Teachers College in Cleveland, Mississippi, and authorized it to award the Bachelor of Science degree in Education. The first baccalaureate degree was conferred in 1928.

With the changing in 1955 of its name to Delta State College, the school began to grow markedly, and in 1965 graduate work for teachers in several fields of concentration was offered. In 1969 and 1970, four schools were added to the academic program—the School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Business, the School of Education, and a School of Graduate Studies. Since 1970, the School of Nursing and the Division of Continuing Education have been added. To further this academic expansion even more, the fall of 1972 saw the initiation of an Educational Specialist degree at Delta State. In 1980, the Board of Trustees authorized Delta State to offer the Doctor of Education degree with emphases in elementary and secondary curriculum and supervision.

In recent years, enrollment has increased, corresponding with increases in physical facilities. Consequently, academic offerings have expanded to meet the demands resulting from this growth. In addition to the originally authorized degree, Delta State University, as the school has been named since 1974, now grants baccalaureate degrees in the sciences, the arts, nursing, music, and business and graduate degrees in education, arts, sciences, business administration, library science, and music education.



Delta State University

Jackson State University

Jackson State University, a coeducational institution located in Jackson, was founded in 1877 as the Natchez Seminary. One hundred years later, the University is a state-supported institution under the auspices of the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning of the State of Mississippi.

Jackson State University, the only urban university, serves the educational needs of more than 8,000 students from rural and urban environments. The University offers degrees on the bachelor's, master's, and specialist levels through its five schools: the School of Education, the School of Business and Economics, the School of Industrial and Technical Studies, the School of Liberal Studies, and the Graduate School. Jackson State also offers the Doctor of Education in Early Childhood Education in the School of Education.

Striving to meet the needs of its urban environment, Jackson State University offers an evening program and a weekend program for students who cannot attend regular day classes.

Mississippi State University

Then named the Agricultural and Mechanical College of the State of Mississippi, Mississippi State University was created as a land-grant institution by the Mississippi Legislature in 1878 under the provisions of the Morrill Act. Its original purpose was to provide agricultural training, and its classroom doors opened in 1880.

In 1892, the college branched out and initiated a School of Engineering, now officially named the College of Engineering, as a separate curriculum. In steady succession, various fields of instruction were added to the curriculum, and today these include the College of Education, the College of Business, the College of Arts and Sciences, the School of Forest Resources, the Division of Computing Affairs, and the Division of Continuing Education. The most recent academic additions include the School of Architecture and the College of Veterinary Medicine.

The 1932 session of the Mississippi Legislature renamed the institution Mississippi State College, and in 1958, it became Mississippi State University. Currently, Mississippi State boasts a complete, varied curriculum, and doctoral work may be obtained in agriculture, business, engineering, education, and in animal, plant, biological, physical, and social sciences.

Two integral components of the overall function of Mississippi State University are the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station and the Cooperative Extension Service. The primary mission of the Experiment Station is agricultural research for the state, but its location on campus strengthens the teaching program also. Off campus, the Station operates ten branch stations located in the various soil and types of farming areas of the state. The Experiment Station operates on state-and federally-appropriated funds supplemented by income from sales of products from the different research projects conducted. Grants from private industry and other sources, such as the National Science Foundation, provide additional funds.

The Cooperative Extension Service provides leadership and information to improve agriculture, related phases of economy, and family living. The Extension Service works closely with the Agricultural Experiment Station to facilitate the gleaning of research-proven data for those who can utilize it. Besides the application of research in the methods of agriculture and home economics, the Extension Service is also concerned with the development of human resources.

Mississippi University For Women

Mississippi University for Women was the first state-supported institution of higher learning in the United States to be established exclusively for the education of women. Created as Mississippi Industrial Institute and College by state legislation in 1884, the college became Mississippi State College for Women in 1920 and Mississippi University for Women in 1974.

Valley State University

Offering a wide variety of curricula, Mississippi University for Women offers its students a wide field of choice in selecting a major for a baccalaureate or master's degree. Seven baccalaureate degrees and five master's degrees are available, as well as an associate, a bachelor's, and a master's degree in nursing. The University now offers the Doctorate of Home Economics Education. The curricula at Mississippi University for Women is organized under four schools: The School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Education, the School of Home Economics, and the School of Nursing.

Mississippi Valley State University

Established by the Legislature of the State of Mississippi in 1946, Mississippi Vocational College's express purpose was to train teachers for rural and elementary schools to provide vocational training. To date, the college provides the state's citizenry with needed training in intellectual and technical skills with an overall curriculum encompassing the arts and sciences, education, and technical education. The curricula are organized into the Division of Arts and Sciences, the Division of Business, the Division of Education, Graduate Studies, and the Division of Technical Education.

The College Accrediting Commission authorized Mississippi Vocational College to grant the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1962. In 1964, the college became Mississippi Valley State College, and in 1974,the name was changed to Mississippi Valley State University. The institution now offers the Bachelor of Science degree and certificates in various areas of technical education. In addition, the master's degree is available in education.

Mississippi Valley State University is an integral part of public higher education in the state, supplying adult education, performing community services, and improving the educational and cultural opportunities of the area.

University Medical Center

In 1950, the Mississippi Legislature enacted legislation for the establishment and construction of the University of Mississippi Medical Center to be located in Jackson. Patients were initially admitted in 1955, and in June, 1957, the first graduation exercises took place.

School of Nursing

The University of Mississippi Medical Center has now grown into a complex structure with several functioning components—the School of Dentistry, the School of Medicine, the School of Nursing, the School of Health Related Professions, Graduate Studies in Medical Sciences, the Peter Rowland Medical Library, research facilities, and the University Teaching Hospital. Working jointly with the hospital and the Division for the Blind, the Addie McBryde Rehabilitation Center for the Blind is a vital part of the complex and the Methodist Rehabilitation Center, which adjoins the teaching hospital, is also a cooperative unit.

The teaching hospital houses modern diagnostic and treatment facilities and serves the entire state, particularly the central area community, as a major general hospital. The hospital staff is appointed by the faculty of the School of Medicine.

University Of Mississippi

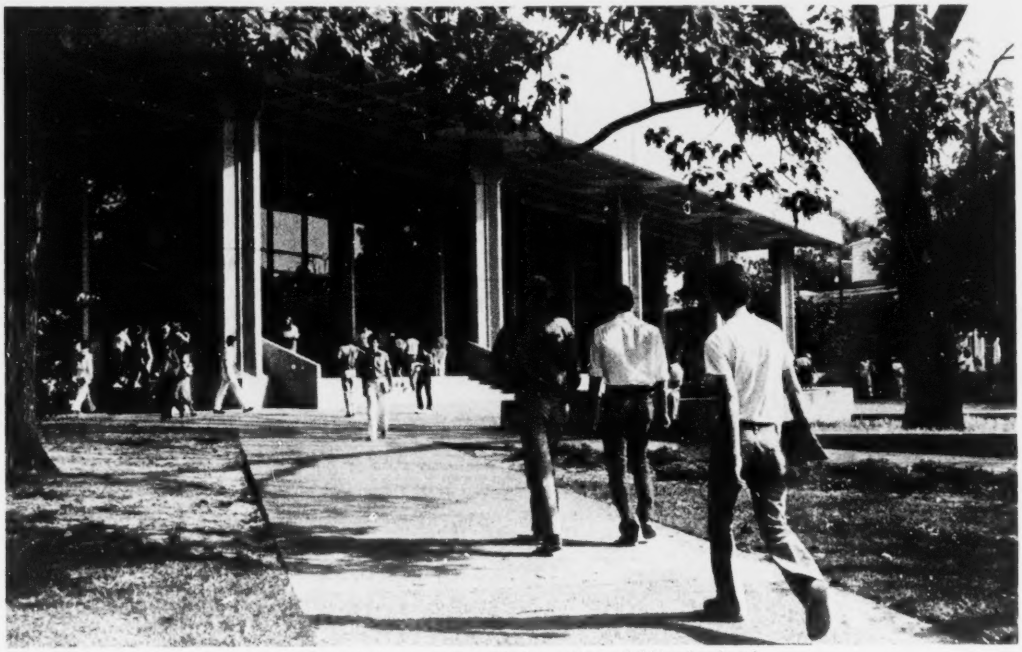
The University of Mississippi began its long tradition of excellence with its official charter on February 24, 1844, and its first session on November 6, 1848. With a faculty comprised of only four members, a general curriculum in liberal arts was offered. While strengthening this college of liberal arts, the trustees and the faculty worked together to enlarge the scope of the institution, and as a result, in 1854, the University's first professional school, the School of Law, was created. Through the passage of time, the campus grew and became reinforced by the additions of the School of Engineering, Schools of Education, Medicine, Pharmacy, and Business Administration, the Graduate School, the School of Nursing, the School of Dentistry, and the School of Accountancy. The Schools of Medicine, Nursing, and Dentistry are now located at the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson.

The University of Mississippi in all of its phases contributes dedicated service to the State of Mississippi and to the nation, following a threefold function of research, teaching, and public service. Long Mississippi's sole university, the University is recognized nationally for its many services and accomplishments. Not only was it instrumental in the accreditation of Mississippi's high schools, but it was a charter member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, and was a founder of the National Association of State Universities.

University Of Southern Mississippi

Since its inception in 1912 as Mississippi Normal College, the University of Southern Mississippi has operated under four names—State Teachers College, 1924; Mississippi Southern College, 1940; and University of Southern Mississippi, 1962.

Southern was created by legislative enactment to train teachers for rural schools throughout the state. From then to the present, it has undergone many changes and is now a multipurpose University with offerings in various fields on the bachelor's, master's, and doctoral levels.



The Union at the University of Mississippi

Research has strengthened the University of Southern Mississippi; the number of doctoral degrees has been increased; the University has established its own scholarly journals; the computer has been equipped to expedite faculty research; and the Office of Research and Projects has been created to assist with and to promote research efforts. The University is currently organized into five colleges: the College of Business Administration, the College of Education and Psychology, the College of Fine Arts, the College of Liberal Arts, and the College of Science and Technology; five schools: the School of Home Economics, the School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, the School of Nursing, the School of Library Services, and the Graduate School of Social Work; and one division: the Division of Extension and Public Service.

Although primarily concerned with resident teaching, the University reaches many Mississippians through various extension and resident centers, workshops, correspondence courses, and degree-granting off-campus programs. The University now has a three-year degree program for those students who wish to expedite the degree-earning process.

Gulf Coast Research Laboratory

The Gulf Coast Research Laboratory at Ocean Springs is affiliated by charter with the state-supported four-year universities under the control of the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning. Although its primary work deals with marine resources research, the Laboratory does offer course work dealing with marine biology and geology. Students receive credit on their respective home campuses for work undertaken at the Laboratory. Private four-year institutions may also use the facilities and research space for marine studies.

Closely related, too, is the Mississippi Sea Grant Consortium, which was formed in 1968 and is made up of four state educational institutions including the Laboratory.

Off-Campus Branches

Geared to the part-time student who cannot otherwise avail himself of a college education, six additions have been made to the higher educational system of Mississippi in the form of degree-granting off-campus branches. One such branch, the Universities Center in Jackson, includes separate branches of Mississippi State University, the University of Mississippi, and the University of Southern Mississippi. Mississippi State University also has a branch in Meridian, and the Vicksburg branch of Mississippi State offers exclusively graduate-level work in engineering in connection with the Waterways Experiment Station. The University of Mississippi has a branch in Tupelo, which now includes the offering of nursing courses on an extension basis from the School of Nursing in Jackson. Still another degree-granting off-campus branch is that located at former Gulf Park College at Long Beach, and it is affiliated with the University of Southern Mississippi. Southern also has a branch in Natchez which is operated in cooperation with Alcorn State University.

Research And Development Center

Set up by the Mississippi Legislature in 1964 to serve the people, businesses, industries, organizations, and institutions of Mississippi, the Research and Development Center is comprised of five major program areas—Business and Industry Development, Local and Area Development, Economic Analysis, Information Services, and Computer Services. These groups function cooperatively to conduct applied research, technical assistance, and service programs, all designed to further the economic development of the State of Mississippi.

MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The Mississippi Department of Economic Development, formerly the Agricultural and Industrial Board, is responsible for the coordination and implementation of all functions of state government relating to economic development and tourism. The Department is composed of three Divisions established by the State Legislature: Industrial, Tourism, and Marketing. The Division of Financial Services is also included in the Department of Economic Development.

The Department of Economic Development's roots can be traced to the Balance Agriculture With Industry (BAWI) program begun by the Legislature in 1936 under Governor Hugh White. During the 1940 legislative session, the BAWI program was superseded by the newly-created Mississippi Board of Development, under Governor Paul B. Johnson, Sr. In 1944, the Legislature again passed a BAWI bond program, and Governor Thomas L. Bailey replaced the Board of Development with the new Agricultural and Industrial Board. The goal of each of these programs was to further the state's economic development.

In 1979, House Bill 1024 was passed, reorganizing the A&I Board under the new Mississippi Department of Economic Development. The bill was signed by Governor Cliff Finch and took effect February 1, 1980, under Governor William Winter.

The Department of Economic Development is governed by the Board of Economic Development, consisting of 14 members. These include the Governor, who serves as chairman; the Lieutenant Governor, vice chairman; the Speaker of the House of Representatives; one member of the Senate and one member of the House to be appointed by the Lieutenant Governor and the Speaker respectively; the Director of the State Research and Development Center; the Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce; and one member from each congressional district and two from the state at large. The Governor also appoints a 25-member Advisory Council to the Board, to serve during the Governor's term.

The Board appoints an executive director who meets certain qualifications to guide the Department of Economic Development in its day-to-day activities. The executive director, with the approval of the Board, selects directors of the Divisions of Industrial Development, Tourism Development, Marketing, and Financial Services, using certain stated qualifications.

These main Divisions perform the following functions:

Division of Industry

The Division of Industry employs advertising, personal solicitations, and specialized studies in its efforts to inform new and expanding industries of the advantages of Mississippi's industrial climate. The Division also assists with the establishment of Mississippi-owned industries and works with communities in preparing them for industrial prospects' visits.

Division of Tourism

Recognizing that the travel industry is a strong contributor to Mississippi's economy, the Division of Tourism utilizes national advertising, exhibits, the Miss Hospitality program, and other promotional activities in trying to increase the number of visitors to the state. Package tour promotions, state welcome centers, and the area tourist councils program play vital roles in the Division's activities.

Division of Marketing

The Marketing Division seeks new marketing opportunities for Mississippi-produced products. Advertising, research, and domestic and international trade missions assist Mississippi businessmen in making new contacts for trade opportunities.

Financial Services

This Division consists of several offices established to assist in providing capital for economic ventures. The Small Business Assistance Department guarantees loans to qualified small businesses; the Office of Minority Business Enterprises gives technical assistance to and helps with financing for minority businesses; and bond financing programs aid in industrial development. The Mississippi Economic Development Corporation, designed to create new sources of venture capital, is also a part of Financial Services. State-owned ports and harbors are under the jurisdiction of the Financial Services Division.

A film liaison office, established to promote and assist in the production of movie and television filming in Mississippi, also exists within the Department of Economic Development.

The Department has offices in the Sillers State Office Building and the Mississippi Trade Mart in Jackson.

Highways in Mississippi play an important role in the economic development of the state. Recognizing the economic role of a state highway system, the Mississippi Legislature enacted two highway programs. One program, passed in 1969, placed $300 million in highway construction to renovate more than 3000 miles of the two-lane system. In 1972 the Legislature enacted legislation which designated seven highway corridors to be constructed to four lanes.

These highways will provide a four-lane corridor when needed within a service distance of each community in the state.

The corridors being developed are as follows:

(1) A road through the western part of the state from Tennessee to Louisiana paralleling the Mississippi River;

(2) A road through the eastern part of the state from Tennessee to the Gulf of Mexico;

(3) A diagonal route connecting Memphis and the Alabama line;

(4) A diagonal route from the City of Jackson to the center of the Mississippi Delta;

(5) A diagonal route connecting the City of Jackson with Northeast Mississippi;

(6) An east-west route from the Mississippi River to Alabama in the mid-southern part of the state;

(7) An east-west route from the Mississippi River to Alabama in the northern part of the state.

Mississippi's designated highway system is comprised of 10,823 miles, including interstates, primary, secondary, and urban highways. This major transportation network is under the jurisdiction of the State Highway Department. Three elected members, one from each of the state's Supreme Court Districts, make up the State Highway Commission, the overall policy-making and governing body of the Highway Department. This commission is directed by law to appoint a secretary, who keeps records of commission meetings, and a director, who appoints the chief engineer. The director is the administrative officer of the State Highway Department; the chief engineer is in charge of the complex engineering establishment.

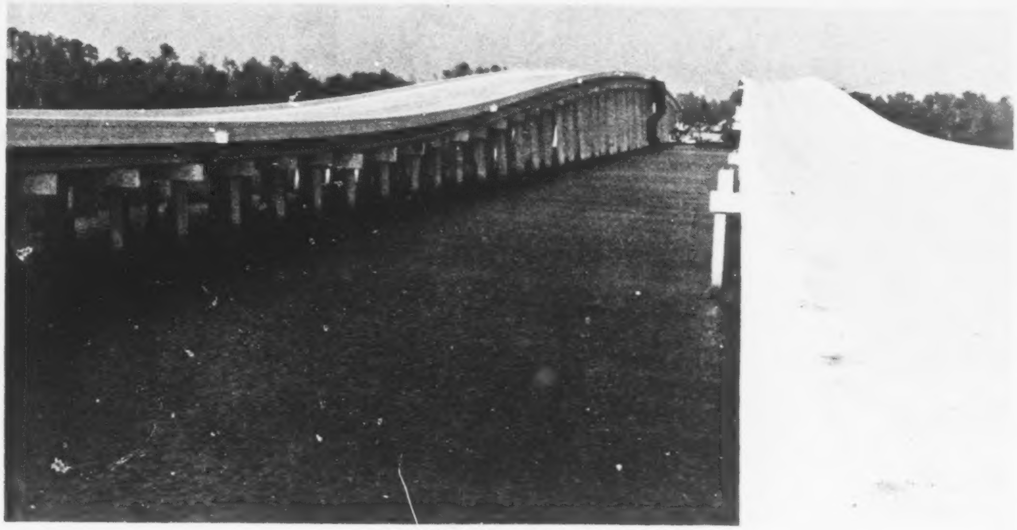
Headquarters for the State Highway Department are in Jackson. The director, chief engineer, construction, maintenance, bridge, testing, planning, design, research and development, traffic control, office engineer, rights of way, equipment, financial control, procurement, office services, systems and procedures, legal, auditing, personnel and public affairs divisions make up the central office function. General administration, planning, design and overall supervision are in these departments.

The Mississippi State Highway Department has approximately 3,000 employees with over 175 registered engineers.

DISTRICTS

Six district offices, two in each commissioner's district, implement the department's field construction and maintenance activities. District offices are located in Tupelo, Batesville, Yazoo City, Newton, Hattiesburg, and McComb. A district engineer, appointed by the chief engineer, is in charge of each, assisted by engineers of construction, maintenance and testing.

Resident and project engineers give field supervision to construction work. These engineers are located in towns and communities convenient to projects and provide engineering direction for all contracts.



U.S. Interstate 10

Bridge on Mississippi Highway 25

In the field, maintenance is carried out under the supervision of maintenance superintendents. The local unit for administration is the area headquarters. These headquarters may cover part of a county, or several counties.

STATE AID DIVISION

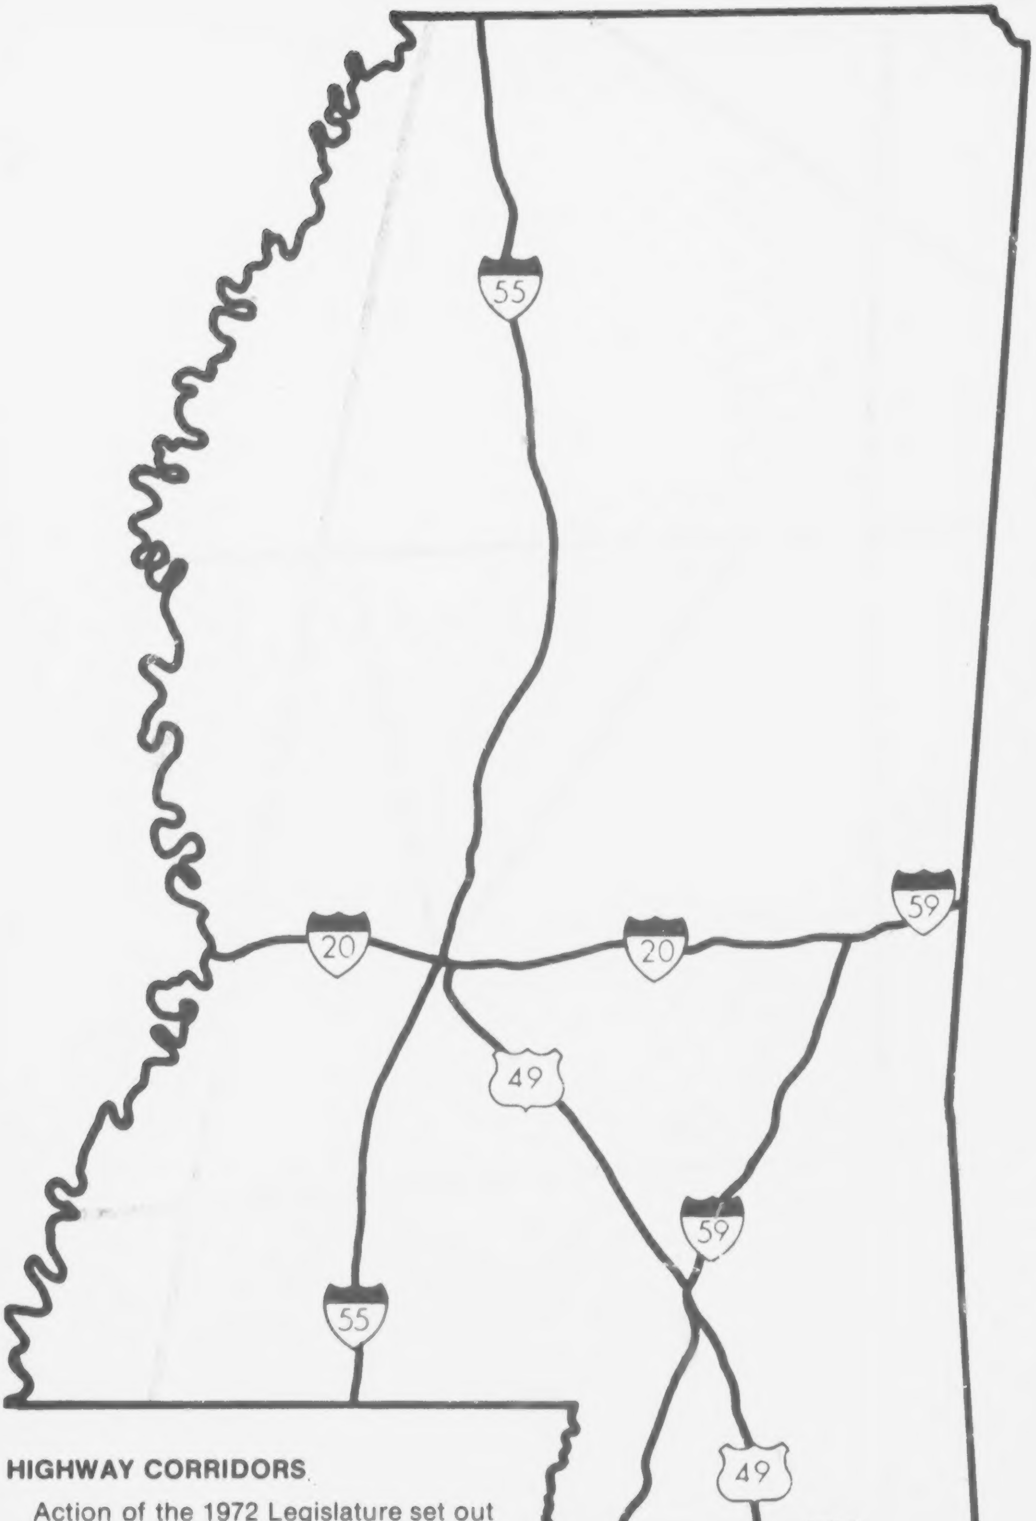
Within the framework of the State Highway Department is a State Aid Division. The state aid engineer is appointed by the Governor for a term of two years. He administers the state aid program for the 82 counties of the state through consultation with the boards of supervisors and approves plans, standards, maintenance, and specifications.

HIGHWAY HISTORY

The first recorded act with a reference to opening and regulating of highways and public roads in Mississippi was dated April 12, 1799, during the state's territorial years. Numerous highway and road acts were passed between this date and April 14, 1916, when the State Highway Commission was established.

Some changes have been made in highway and road laws, but control and authority has been retained in the hands of local authorities. However, certain powers were given the Highway Commission by "The Stansel Act" of 1930; these powers still form the basis for current highway authorization.

The Highway Commission is regulated by legislative statutes. The duty of the Highway Commission is to administer highway construction using state and federal funds in cooperation with the Federal Highway Administration. Maintenance of the state highway system is done with state funds only. Funds for construction and maintenance of state highways accrue from a partial allocation of the gasoline tax, cigarette tax, truck taxes, and federal funds appropriated by the Congress. The state highway system is designated by the Legislature. Highways on which federal funds can be spent must be approved by the Federal Highway Administration.



HIGHWAY CORRIDORS

Action of the 1972 Legislature set out that the above corridors be developed to four-lane. The program passed raised $18 million a year in new revenues for construction of highways.

REVENUES

Funds accruing to the Highway Department are mainly derived from highway user's taxes with a nine-cent state tax and a four-cent federal tax on a gallon of gasoline, plus $42 million of a sales tax on motor fuel. Other taxes levied to finance highways are on cigarettes and trucks, with 15% of tax collected on cigarettes up to five million annually and a privilege and decal tax on trucks being enacted during the 1972 session of the Legislature.

Of the gross fuel tax revenues, twenty percent of seven cents and one cent raised in 1969 are earmarked for construction and reconstruction of the highways in the state. These funds are also used to pay bond debt.

The new revenues raised in 1972, which include a one-cent gasoline tax, a cigarette tax and two truck taxes are being used to construct the corridor system.

Deductions from seven cents of the fuel tax are made for refunds, Motor Vehicle Commission, Aeronautical Commission and several other items. The remaining seven cents is divided on a 14/14 basis with 9/14 going to the Highway Department and 5/14 to the counties. One third of the Highway Department's 9/14 is earmarked for construction and must first be used to match Federal Aid.

All construction funds received by the State Highway Department are earmarked by federal and state laws to specific types of highways: interstate, primary, secondary and urban. On the interstate, the Federal Government pays ninety percent of the cost; while primary, secondary and urban funds are matched 50-50.

PRIORITIES

Location of construction work in the state is determined by a formula based on "relative use and importance" as set out by law. In part, the formula is made up of factors such as the present and future traffic count of each highway, its convenience, public necessity and public safety of each highway. The formula also takes into consideration the connecting of Mississippi towns, cities and population centers, and whether they are a part of the main arterial road system.

INTERSTATE

The interstate system marks the boldest attempt yet made to design highways for the future. It differs from conventional highway construction in its full control of access, completely divided traffic lanes, higher standards of alignment, and structural strength. These standards are predicated upon 20-year predictions, when, according to economists and highway engineers, there will be more than 100,000,000 vehicles in the United States. Defense considerations, rapid mobility of military units, evacuation of population centers, etc., also influenced Interstate design standards.

Mississippi has a total of 683 miles on the Federal Interstate System authorized by the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1956, as amended. Four highways are included in this system. These are Interstate 55, which parallels present U.S. 51; interstate 59, which parallels U.S. Highway 11; Interstate 20, which parallels present U.S. Highway 80; and Interstate 10, which parallels present U.S. Highway 90. There are also two spurs — Interstate 110 and Interstate 220, which complete the total interstate system mileage.

PRIMARY AND SECONDARY

Today's primary and secondary roads are being built to standards structurally and geometrically far above those which prevailed just a few years ago. The cost of this type construction is higher, but these standards are expected to increase the useful life of these highways many years.

As of June 30, 1980, the Highway Department had responsibility for maintaining 10,162 miles of road. Of this total, 9,996 miles are paved. Virtually all of the unpaved mileage is on the secondary system. Approximately 661 miles have been designated by the Legislature, but because of inadequate financing have not been taken over from the counties.

Aeronautics Commission

Kenneth A. Barfield, Director

The Uniform State Aeronautics Act was adopted by the 1948 Legislature. Other Uniform Aviation Acts that have been adopted by the Legislature are the Municipal Airport Act, Airport Zoning Act, and the Airport Authority Act.

The Aeronautics Commission, which was created by the 1946 Legislature, is composed of three Commissioners who are appointed by the Governor, one from each supreme court district, with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Commissioners receive no compensation for their services. The Commission is charged with the responsibility of encouraging, fostering and assisting in the advancement of aeronautics in this state. It promotes the use of commercial and private air transportation for travel, cargo movements and similar applications and the establishment of related airports and air navigation facilities.

AIR SERVICES

Scheduled airline service and general aviation are the two broad categories in the air transportation system. Scheduled airline service is currently available through ten airports in the state, by five airlines whose combined services provide regional, national and international travel in all directions.

Delta Air Lines provides all jet air service, north, east and west from Allen C. Thompson Field, Jackson.

Republic Airlines serves nine airports, providing air service to fourteen cities in the state—Tupelo, Oxford, Greenwood, Greenville, Columbus, Starkville, West Point, Jackson, Vicksburg, Meridian, Laurel, Hattiesburg, Biloxi and Gulfport.

Frontier Airlines provides Jackson with single plane jet air service to Denver through Little Rock. Royal, a commuter airline, provides air service between Natchez, Jackson and New Orleans. Rio, another commuter airline, provides Greenville with additional service to Memphis.

General aviation is all civil aviation excluding the certificated schedule airlines. In Mississippi the growth and development of general aviation has followed the national trend. The increased use of air transportation in business, agriculture and air taxi services has been the prime growth factor.

Federal Aviation Administration records in May 1980, list 5,596 active certificated airmen in the state and 2,654 aircraft. Ownership of the aircraft was as follows: individuals 1,385, partnerships 120, corporations 912, co-owners 158, and government 79.

Runways at Allen C. Thompson Airport, Jackson

AIRPORTS

There are seventy-six publicly owned and operated airports in Mississippi. Ten of these serve the scheduled airlines and general aviation; sixty-six serve general aviation exclusively; seventy-four have hard-surfaced runways, and sixty have lights for night operations.

AIRPORT SYSTEM PLAN

The Mississippi Airport System Plan is a compilation of development needs for state civil airports in the immediate years ahead. The plan, although published periodically, represents a continuous planning process and is constantly being updated. Aviation as well as other forms of transportation must compete for limited resources at the state and local levels. For this reason, maximum use is made of existing aeronautical facilities. The current plan lists a total of eighty-nine airports, including eleven proposed new locations. When these airports are physically complete, all areas of the state will be within fifteen miles or thirty minutes driving time from an airport.

AERONAUTICAL CHART

The Aeronautics Commission publishes annual editions of the Mississippi Aeronautical Chart and Airport Directory. The chart presents airports, airways, navigational aids and topographical information. The chart negatives, prepared by Commission personnel, are lithographically printed in multicolor in Mississippi and are distributed to pilots throughout the nation.

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION

A system of electronic and radio aids to navigation is operated and maintained throughout the state by the Federal Aviation Administration. Air Traffic Control towers are operated at Thompson and Hawkins Fields, Jackson, Key Field, Meridian; Gulfport-Biloxi Regional Airport, Gulfport; and Greenville International Airport, Greenville.

MISSISSIPPI'S CONTRIBUTION TO AVIATION DEVELOPMENT

Since the first flight of the Wright Brothers at Kitty Hawk in 1903, many Mississippians have made outstanding records and contributions in the development of aviation. Included in the list are: The Flying Stinson Family of Aberdeen, Al and Fred Key of Meridian, Roscoe Turner of Corinth, Lt. Eugene H. Barksdale of Golden Springs, Lt. Commander George Anderson of Holly Springs, Dick Merrel of Iuka, Capt. William Odom of Columbus, Randolph Holden of Jackson, Milton Peck of Vicksburg, Dr. August Raspert of Mississippi State, Apollo 13 Crewman, Fredrick Wallace Haise, Jr. of Biloxi, and C. A. "Bud" Moore of Lexington, the first Director of the Aeronautics Commission.

The first commercial application of chemicals to a growing crop from the air occurred at Heathman, Mississippi, in 1924.

The first scheduled airline flight into Mississippi began on June 17, 1929. On that date Delta Airlines began its initial route which was between Jackson and Dallas, Texas, with stops in Monroe and Shreveport, Louisiana.

Public Service Commission

The state has had a regulatory agency for public carriers since 1884 when the Mississippi Railroad Commission was created. In later years when the agency became the Mississippi Public Service Commission, the powers of the body were extended from railroads into the fields of motor carriers, electricity, natural gas, telephone, telegraph, water, sewer, and gas pipeline safety regulation.

The 1956 Public Utilities Act placed all utilities except municipally owned or operated utilities (serving within the corporate limits and up to one mile beyond) and certain cooperatives under the commission regulation for rates, service, and area.

Now the commission is composed of the three elected commissioners, the executive secretary and 84 assistants, including the Utility Division, Motor Carrier Division, and the Utility Investigation Department, the Engineering, Utility Rate Department, Financial Analysis Department, Gas Pipeline Safety Department, Transportation Rate Department, Department of Court Reporters, Department of Insurance, and Accounting and Auditing Department.

Over a 4-year period ending June 30, 1980, the Public Service Commission heard a total of 3,309 utility, motor carrier, and railroad cases, an average of slightly over 68 cases per month. These cases range from multi-million dollar rate hearings to individual area transfers.

Among the utility cases before the commission are applications of water associations, which total 541 in the state, seeking authorization to operate as nonprofit organizations. They represent an investment of 120 million dollars.

Today, in addition to the South Central Bell Telephone Company's total investment of $1,268,000,000, there are 22 independent telephone companies in the state which have more than 73,000 telephones in service with all modern equipped exchanges, and an investment of almost 45 million dollars.

As of June 1980, the commission regulated 46 electric power utilities, 31 natural gas companies, 53 communications companies, 708 water companies, and 99 sewer companies, for a total of 937 utilities holding Certificates of Public Convenience and Necessity from the Public Service Commission.

DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The following delegated powers and perogatives are generally accepted and sanctioned by the courts.

1. LEGISLATIVE powers and authority, which include the promulgating of rules and regulations, and prescribing and fixing just and reasonable rates.

2. QUASI-JUDICIAL powers and authority in the official acts of the commission in its renditions, opinions, and resultant orders, arising from hearing all matters coming before the commission.

3. ADMINISTRATIVE powers and authority which include the enforcement of all rules and regulations, all orders and directives issued by the commission, and all prescribed rules and laws enacted by the Legislature and assigned to this department for enforcement.

It is the commission's responsibility to see that rates and charges for service are just and reasonable, that the approved rate schedules are adhered to, that the service rendered is reasonably adequate,and that the facilities constructed or acquired are required for the convenience and necessity of the public. In carrying out its responsibility, the commission must answer complaints, make investigations, and conduct formal and informal hearings.

UTILITIES DIVISION

The Utilities Division of the commission covers the total spectrum of utilities operation within the regulatory agency. In addition to the engineering, rates, and accounting, it includes the utility investigation and compliance department, which is charged with the responsibility of conducting public meetings regarding utility matters, handling consumer complaints, working in conjunction with the utility companies in expansion programs, conducting surveys to determine type and quality of service provided. This department also compiles information as to the availability of utility facilities. The department conducts an average of 3,800 investigations each year.

The Pipeline Safety Department is charged with the enforcement of the 1968 Federal Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act as amended.

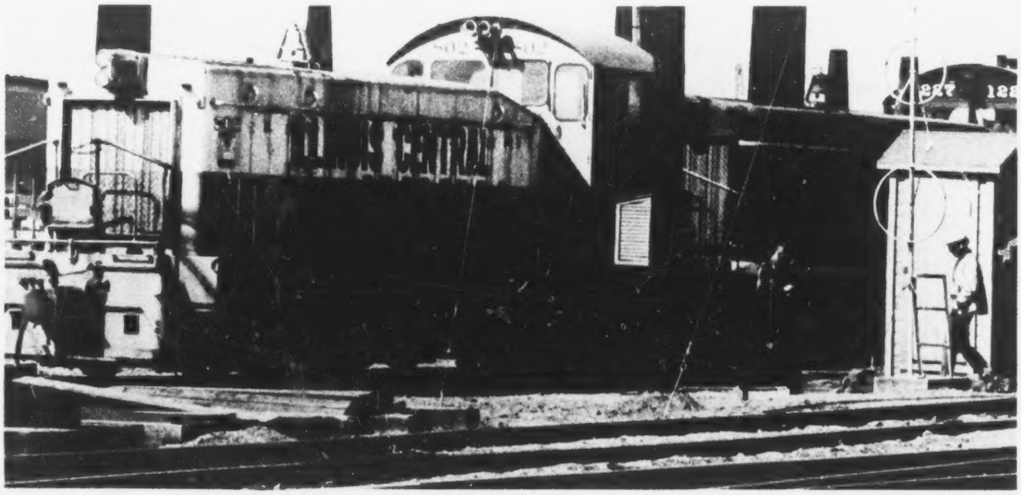
The commission now has an energy section which is charged with the responsibility of complying with federal acts dealing with utility-related energy matters with emphasis on conservation and research of new energy sources and supply.

ENGINEERING

The engineering staff provides assistance to the commission and other staff members in the analysis of exhibits to the testimony of technical witnesses, and in the interpretation of tariffs of newly organized utilities seeking approval of their proposed rates, terms, and conditions, which constitute a major activity. In cases of revisions and additions to an established tariff of a utility, the engineering staff advises the commission of the effect of such changes, insures proper procedure and provides supplementary information pertaining to new classes or types of service offered or withdrawn.

ACCOUNTING

The Accounting and Finance Department of the Commission assists the commission in matters regarding the accountability of all utilities under its jurisdiction, performs audits and prepares accounting studies necessitated by the filing of rate applications by the various utilities, prepares necessary financial reports, data and studies to be used in rate hearings and rate proceedings, together with the preparation of cost studies and pro forma statements of operations showing the effect of requested rate increases on utility customers. These duties are in addition to all internal accounting of the commission.



Railroading

TRANSPORTATION DIVISION

The Transportation Division includes a Chief Law Enforcement Officer and 15 inspectors, who are responsible for enforcing the Motor Carrier Regulatory Act of 1938, and six railroad safety inspectors resulting from the Railroad Safety Act of 1970. The motor carrier enforcement personnel's duties include investigation of all alleged violations and direct enforcement of all laws, rules, regulations, orders, and directives of the commission. In addition, they are responsible for detection and apprehension of carriers transporting property for hire without authority.

The railroad inspectors' duties include the safety of the broad spectrum of track, roadbeds, bridges, and all other related equipment, including engines and cars of the 13 railroads operating over the 3,447 miles of track in Mississippi.

Mississippi Power & Light Company

Mississippi Power & Light Company, organized in 1923, is the state's largest investor-owned electric utility, operating in 45 counties of western Mississippi and headquartered in Jackson.

The company pioneered in economic development in the state, and shortly after its formation began an organized campaign to raise the standard of living of its area through promotion of new and expanded industries. Beginning with three isolated municipal systems, the company has experienced steady growth over the years and now has one of the strongest interconnecting systems in the South. At the end of 1979, the utility had an investment of approximately $753 million in plants and facilities.

All five plants currently generating electricity in the company's system are what is known as "steam electric generating stations." This means that water is heated to produce steam which turns the turbines in generators to produce power. All but one of the generating stations were originally built to use natural gas as the primary boiler fuel, with the newest of the five—the Gerald Andrus plant at Greenville—being built to use fuel oil as the primary fuel. It became necessary to convert the other four plants to burn fuel oil as the primary fuel after 1970 when a federal ruling allowed MP&L's long-term contract with its chief natural gas supplier to be abrogated.

The five plants, listed chronologically with the capability of each, are as follows: Rex Brown, Jackson, 401,000 kilowatts; Natchez, at Natchez, 73,000 kilowatts; Delta, Cleveland, 207,000 kilowatts; Baxter Wilson, Vicksburg, 1,321,000 kilowatts; and Gerald Andrus, Greenville, 761,000 kilowatts. This gives the company system a total generating capability of 2,763,000 kilowatts. In addition, MP&L operates as an integrated member of the Middle South Utilities, Inc., system, and has interconnection with other surrounding systems, including the TVA.

Also, MP&L is in charge of construction and will maintain and operate the first nuclear-powered electric generating facility in the state, the Grand Gulf Nuclear Station near Port Gibson. The $3 billion plant is by far the largest construction project in Mississippi's history and is one of the largest by an investor-owned company in the nation. The first unit of the 2,500,000 kilowatt plant will be completed in 1982, with the second unit to be completed in 1986. The Grand Gulf facility is financed and owned by Middle South Energy, Inc., a subsidiary of Middle South Utilities.

The company has nine operating divisions and employs over 1,750 men and women to provide service to homes, businesses, industries and farms in approximately 500 cities, towns and communities in western Mississippi. It has over 303,000 direct customers. At the beginning of 1980, it was additionally serving some 125,000 indirect customers through the wholesale service to seven rural electric power associations, and five municipal systems.

The company was the first in the state to utilize extra high voltage (EHV) transmission. It now has 293 miles of 500,000 volt transmission lines in service, with an additional 24 miles of such lines to be completed by late 1983.

Other operating companies, besides MP&L, in the Middle South System are Arkansas Power & Light Company, Arkansas-Missouri Power Company, Louisiana Power & Light Company, and New Orleans Public Services, Inc.

Mississippi Power Company

Mississippi Power Company, with general offices in Gulfport, has been a Mississippi industry since 1925. An investor-owned taxpaying utility, the company operates in 23 southeast Mississippi counties, providing electric service to retail customers in 122 communities and wholesale electric service to three REA-financed electric cooperatives. Offices of the company are maintained in 31 municipalities, including the general office at Gulfport and division offices in Gulfport, Hattiesburg, Laurel, and Meridian.

The company owns and operates three high-pressure steam-electric generating plants in southeast Mississippi: Watson Electric Generating Plant between Biloxi and Gulfport; Sweatt Electric Generating Plant near Meridian; and Eaton Electric Generating Plant near Hattiesburg-Petal. Mississippi Power owns and operates a gas-fired turbine generating station at the Standard Oil Company refinery at Pascagoula. In addition, Mississippi Power Company jointly owns the Greene County Electric Generating Plant near Demopolis, Alabama, with Alabama Power Company and Daniel Electric Generating Plant near Moss Point-Pascagoula with Gulf Power Company.

Mississippi Power Company's aggregate installed generating capacity totals 1,965,760 kilowatts, of which some 73.8 percent utilizes coal as primary boiler fuel. The company maintains a network of some 2,019 miles of high voltage transmission lines, 4,423 miles of distribution lines and 176 substations.

Since 1925, Mississippi Power Company has invested more than $664 million in electric facilities. It is estimated that the company will spend approximately $175 million during the years 1980-82 for new construction.

Mississippi Power Company is concerned with the protection of air and water as it pertains to the generation of electric power. Plants are designed and operated to insure compliance with environmental regulations of federal and state agencies. Mississippi Power Company has invested through 1979 over $74 million in environmental protection equipment.

Mississippi Power Company's generating and transmission facilities are inter-connected with and operate as a part of the southern electric system which also includes Alabama, Georgia, and Gulf power companies. Together, these companies make up one of the nation's major investor-owned electric utility groups which serve directly some 2.5 million customers.

Electric Power Associations

The Electric Power Associations of Mississippi came into existence in 1936 as the result of legislation enacted by the Mississippi Legislature, largely to serve the needs for rural electrification.

Now, there are 26 electric power associations organized in the state by rural people. Before the beginning of the EPA program, only 2802 farms were served with electricity. As of January 1, 1980, locally owned and managed electric power associations had placed 67,025 miles of distribution lines in operation serving 415,024 consumers. Over 99 percent of rural Mississippi receives electric service.

At the beginning of 1980, the Rural Electrification Administration and the Cooperative Finance Corporation had approved $303,859,570 in distribution loans in the state, and $287,284,181 to South Mississippi Electric Power Association for construction of two generating plants in South Mississippi.

TVA Electric Power

Fourteen municipalities and fourteen rural electric power associations buy wholesale power from the Tennessee Valley Authority in the northeastern section of the state. These distributors own and operate their own facilities providing electric service to consumers in over 300 communities throughout an area of over 16,000 square miles comprising all or parts of 35 counties.

The consumer-owned electric power associations are as follows:

*Alcorn County Electric Power Association, Corinth, Charles Barnett, Manager
*Central Electric Power Association, Carthage, John Sanders, Manager
Coahoma Electric Power Association, Lyon, Giles Bounds, Manager
Coast Electric Power Association, Bay St. Louis, Henry L. Thomas, Manager

*Electric Power Associations in the TVA area
Part of Electric Power Association in the TVA area

Improve Income

The electric power associations work with the state and county agricultural agencies in promoting and carrying out programs designed to improve farm income, afford a better standard of living, and provide the comforts and conveniences for a happy rural life.

Rural business and industries are served by the electric power associations. The expansion of this business and industry is actively supported by the electric power associations through their Industrial Development Department and through the North Mississippi Industrial Development Association. As a result, the electric power associations are making a significant contribution to the economic growth of Mississippi.

South Central Bell Telephone Company

South Central Bell Telephone Company is an associated company of the Bell System. South Central Bell provides communications services in Mississippi and four other southern states. Services provided include local and long distance, transmission of data and graphic information, and provision of business communication systems.

The Mississippi operations of South Central Bell serve 82 percent of the households in its franchised area. This service is provided in 167 exchanges located throughout the state.

To accommodate the growing demand for telephone service throughout Mississippi, South Central Bell plans to spend over a billion dollars for new and expanded service and facilities for the five-year period 1980-1984. Expansion of electronic central offices, greater customer access to automatic number identification equipment and Touch-Tone® service, and provision of facilities in rapid growth areas of Mississippi are provided for in these planned construction expenditures.

During 1979, although the company installed 400,000 telephones for a net increase of 66,600, it still had 4,411 applications for service at the end of the year that could not be filled because facilities were not available. Consequently, almost half the proposed construction budget over the next five years will be spent to handle growth alone in both urban and rural areas. It is estimated that the company's statewide communications network will have to be enlarged enough to handle an additional 346,000 telephones.

A progress report on the company's 1979 Mississippi operations included:

Total telephones in service	1,455,268
Total employees	8,301
Total state and local taxes	$ 24.9 million
Total payroll	$ 152 million
Total expenditures for goods, services and contract work paid to Mississippi suppliers and businesses	$ 64 million
Total new construction expenditures	$196.1 million

Which provided:

Facilities for 66,600 additional telephones

The installation of almost 8 telephones to gain 1 because of customer movement

An enlarged statewide communications network to handle a 7 percent increase in local calling and a 13 percent increase in long distance calling

The installation of over 1,000,000 conductor miles of wire in cable

The construction of 31 major central office additions and 12 major building additions

The elimination of 5,413 eight-party telephones. Eight-party service has been reduced to less than 1½ percent of total main telephones

Automatic number identification is now available to 84 percent of total main telephones

In locations where Touch-Tone® service is available, 73.8 percent of total main telephones are equipped

International direct distance dialing made available to a total of 280,000 customers

There are 32 PhoneCenter Stores serving the major exchanges in Mississippi where customers can have a convenient place to come in, shop for and pick up telephone service and equipment

Two major disasters — the Easter Flood and Hurricane Frederic — were a severe test of the company's ability to respond quickly during emergency situations. Company response to the Aberdeen central office explosion resulted in the installation of an electronic switching system (ESS) central office in 10 days rather than the normal installation time of 18 months.

State Tax Commission

A. C. LAMBERT, CHAIRMAN

The commission maintains headquarters in the Woolfolk State Office Building in Jackson. About 465 of its 1000 regular employees work there in offices or administrative functions, while the balance carry out the various field operations of the agency. Revenues collected by the department went over the one billion mark in fiscal year 1979 for the first time in Mississippi history. Six major divisions make up the departments organizational structure.

ABC Division
R. L. Livingston, Director

The primary purpose of the ABC is enforcement of the prohibition laws of the state. In those counties which have elected to come out from under the dry laws, the state is the wholesale supplier of liquor and wines to those people who have received permits based on statutory qualifications. The retail sales function is carried out by licensed individuals under the over-sight and supervision of ABC inspectors and enforcement agents. In wet counties, statutory restrictions are likewise enforced by ABC agents. The collection of taxes imposed on alcoholic beverages is collected in the process of supplying liquor to retailers.

Administrative Services Bureau
George S. Milam, Director

The Administrative Services Bureau responsibilities include a variety of duties relating to the operation of the State Tax Commission. The major functional areas of this bureau are accounting, processing, and systems and procedures (data processing) along with the operation of such support activities as the printing shop, purchasing, and the mail room. This bureau's accounting division prepares and administers the agency budget, handles all accounts payable, accounts receivable, and prepares the payroll for all agency employees. The systems and procedures division is the data processing function and supports all areas of the Tax Commission operations. All other areas, including processing, work with and support various other bureau's and departments of the agency.

Field Audit and Activities Bureau
Eddie P. Beck, Director

This bureau is responsible for all field operations of the Mississippi State Tax Commission. It is made up of nine (9) in-state districts, one district for out-of-state taxpayers, the L C Gas Division and the Review Board.

Its responsibilities include the registration of all sales, use, withholding, petroleum, and other similar taxes, and the maintaining of these taxpayers on a current filing status. It also performs audits to determine if proper taxes are being reported. The bureau also inspects all liquefied compressed gas installations for safety purposes and makes inspections for pump accuracy and quality on motor fuels for consumer protection.

Law Enforcement Bureau
Willie Richardson, Director

The Law Enforcement Bureau is responsible for weighing all vehicles on all highways. Enforcement officers collect fines and issue permits to over-weight vehicles. Weigh stations are operated on a twenty-four hour basis — forty-one stationary scales and twenty-eight portable scales.

Property Tax Bureau
Allen Birsell, Director

The Property Tax Bureau consists of the Ad Valorem, Equalization, and Homestead Exemption Divisions.

Its functions are: To assist local officials in achieving and maintaining statewide equalization of ad valorem assessments; to reimburse proper and correct tax loss claims and provide assistance to local officials in the administration of the Homestead Exemption Law; to prepare motor vehicle and mobile home assessment schedules; to examine county personal and real property tax rolls; to administer the Freeport Warehouse Law; and to assess railroads and other public service corporations including airlines and private car lines.

Revenue Bureau
H. E. Chamblee, Director

The Bureau of Revenue is responsible for the interpretation and administration of all revenue laws administered by the State Tax Commission. The Bureau consists of the following divisions:

Sales and Use Tax
Income and Franchise Tax
Tobacco, Beer and Severance Tax
Petroleum Tax
Motor Vehicle Privilege Tax

Good herds add to income

Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce

JIM BUCK ROSS, COMMISSIONER

Mississippi's economy is closely tied to the products of its soil. Cash returns to agriculture from sales of crops, livestock and government payments were over $2 billion during 1978. Mississippi agriculture today is an efficient and well-balanced industry with cash income from sales of products divided almost equally between crop and livestock enterprises. In 1978, cotton, soybeans, meat animals and poultry and eggs each contributed 22, 26, 20 and 19 percent respectively of the total cash income from marketings. In 1956, cotton alone accounted for nearly 57 percent of the state's cash farm income; soybeans 5 percent; meat animals about 12 percent; and poultry and eggs 9 percent.

The Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce was created in 1906 with the primary responsibility of promoting the general welfare of Mississippi agriculture. To indirectly support the functions of both regulatory and service activities, the agency collects various inspection and service fees. All revenue is deposited into the State Treasury from which funds are appropriated for operation.

The Commissioner of Agriculture is charged with leadership and supervision in the field of agriculture. Active in regulatory, promotion and public service functions, the department is presently a full service agency. As an elected official, the Commissioner also serves as a member of numerous boards and commissions.

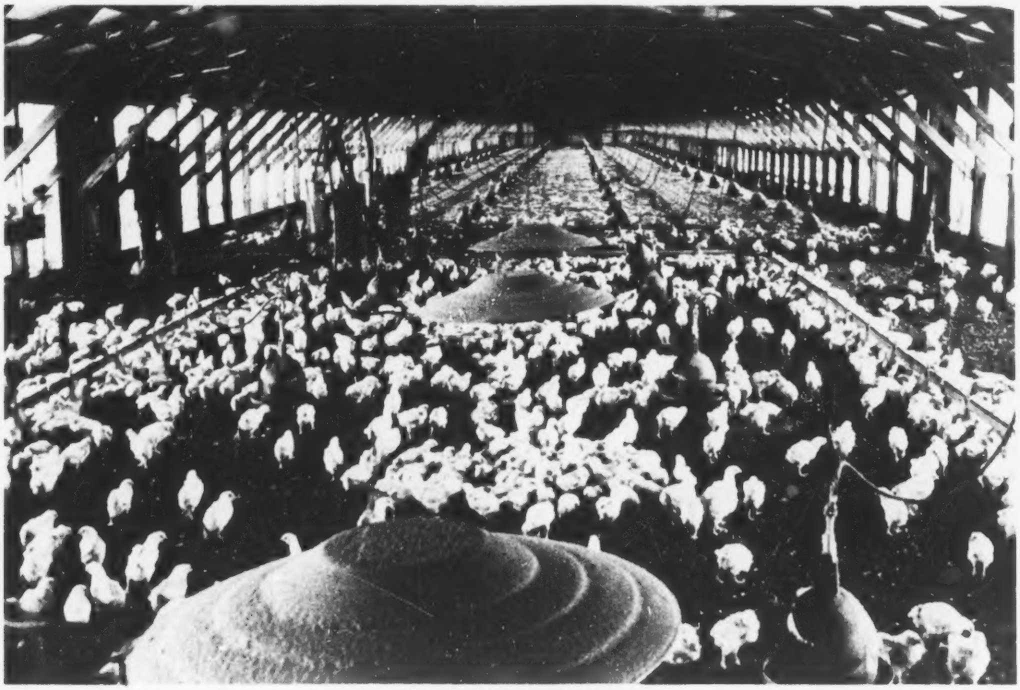
Activities of the department are handled by various divisions under the direction of the Commissioner.

REGULATORY MEASURES

The Consumer Protection Division is charged with the administration and enforcement of laws and regulations concerning eggs, dairy products, syrup, honey, weights and measures. Feed and Fertilizer Control Laws provide for the registration and labeling of these commodities. The Seed Law requires truth in the labeling of planting seed. Meat Inspection brings meat processing plants into compliance with federal requirements. Swine Health protects against Hog Cholera and other contagious diseases; while the Board of Animal Health handles Brucellosis and infectious livestock and poultry diseases. Mississippi is the only state capable of conducting an imported fire ant control program. The Plant Industry Division administers a number of laws concerning insect pest and plant diseases.

SERVICE FUNCTIONS

In order to apply crushed limestone to Mississippi farmers at production cost, the department operates three lime plants. The Farmers Central Market, in Jackson, serves to provide facilities for the efficient handling of farm products for the benefit of the farmer, consumer and general public. The Mississippi Market Bulletin continues to offer marketing services for a wide range of agricultural commodities. The department is authorized by the United States Department of Agriculture to provide grain grading and weighing services at both inland and export points, as requested.



A growing industry

POULTRY

Mississippi is the nation's 5th largest broiler producing state and holds 15th place in the production of eggs. The combined cash farm income from the sale of all poultry and eggs totaled $379,570,000 in 1978, about 11 percent above the $341,943,000 received from marketings in 1977.

In 1979, Mississippi produced 1,653,000,000 eggs compared with 1,696,000,000 produced in 1978. Broiler production during 1979 totaled 276,858,000 birds compared with 269,373,000 in 1978, an increase of about 3 percent.

HOGS

The hog population for the state totaled 440,000 head on December 1, 1979, reflecting a 7 percent increase from 1978. The value of hogs and pigs on farms was $20,900,000. Cash receipts from the sale of hogs brought in $44,550,000 during 1979, an increase of 5 percent over cash receipts of $42,403,000 in 1978. Mississippi ranks 22nd among all states in the number of hogs and pigs on farms.

CATTLE AND CALVES

The total number of all cattle and calves on Mississippi farms was 1,810,000 on January 1, 1980. This was a 1 percent increase over the January 1, 1979, total of 1,790,000 head. Cattle and calves on farms January 1, 1980, had a value of $733,050,000.

Mississippi ranks 23rd among all states in the number of all cattle and calves, 14th in the number of beef cows and heifers that have calves, and 28th in the number of milk cows.

Milk cows numbers averaged 100,000 head on farms during 1979, down 6 percent from the 1978 average of 106,000 head. Mississippi farmers marketed 798 million pounds of milk in 1979, a 2 percent decline from the 817 million pounds marketed in 1978. Grade A milk accounted for 95 percent of all milk marketed, the same percentage as a year earlier.

PROMOTIONAL ACTIVITIES

Market Development personnel work very closely with commodity organizations to introduce Mississippi grown food, fiber and other related agricultural products to the domestic consuming public and foreign buyers. The department is active with Keep Mississippi Beautiful, the coordinating agency through which business, industry, government and public organizations may work together to solve environmental problems. Excellent progress is being made with the development of the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Museum, which will be a showcase of Mississippi's past and present.

LABORATORY FACILITIES

The Diagnostic, Meat Inspection and Dairy Production Laboratories are all located in Jackson. The State Seed Testing Laboratory is on the campus of Mississippi State University. The Metrology Laboratory is at Alcorn University. The Grain Moisture Meter Laboratory is on the Delta State University campus. The Grain Export Laboratory is at Pascagoula with regular and seasonal service being provided at several inland points.

Forestry

Seed orchard—producing superior trees for the future

After the turn of the century, the magnificent virgin pine forests of Mississippi were stripped by heavy harvesting and the land left virtually denuded. Since 1930 when the first reforestation efforts began, Mississippi has virtually restored its forests. Now some 50 to 60 million tree seedlings are set out yearly. The state today leads the nation in the number of certified tree farms.

In recent years, the increased demand for forest products has brought on tremendous industrial expansion in Mississippi from wood-using industries. An estimated 74,000 Mississippians are employed in forest products and related industries. Timber-based economic activities alone, not counting substantial forest values in recreation, wildlife and aesthetics, annually generate 2.9 billion dollars in total spending in Mississippi.

FORESTRY COMMISSION

Dick Allen, State Forester

The Mississippi Forestry Commission was created in 1926 with major responsibilities for prevention and suppression of forest fires; enforcing laws pertaining to protection of forests; production of tree seedlings for reforestation purposes, and technical assistance in public and private forest management.

FIRE CONTROL

The commission provides fire protection on nearly 18 million acres of timbered and uncultivatable lands in 81 of the state's 82 counties. It maintains lookout towers, supplemented by air patrol, for detection and location of forest fires. During fire season the commission mans nearly 200 fire control units. In the period outside normal fire season, a reduced force is used to provide year-round fire protection.

FOREST MANAGEMENT

Activities of this program include forest management assistance to private forest owners; management of timberlands on sixteenth sections, Kurtz State Forest, Camp Shelby Military Reservation, and other lands, and carrying out forestry practices under the Small Watershed and several Forestry Incentive Programs.

NURSERY AND GENETICS

The commission operates tree nurseries at Winona, Mount Olive and Waynesboro, which can produce over 100 million seedlings per year at top production. Seed orchards were established in recent years on the Kurtz State Forest and at Baxterville to produce genetically improved seed for use in future seedling production at commission nurseries. Seedlings are offered for sale to landowners on a year-round basis.

INSECT AND DISEASE CONTROL

The commission has the responsibility for detection, evaluation, and control of forest pests in Mississippi. This service is available to all private and state-owned lands.

INFORMATION AND EDUCATION

Through information and education programs, the commission meets its responsibilities to inform the public of the economic and environmental benefits offered by timber, our most valuable renewable resource.

News media, exhibits, school and civic club programs, etc., are all utilized in the promotion of fire prevention, forest management and other forestry programs.

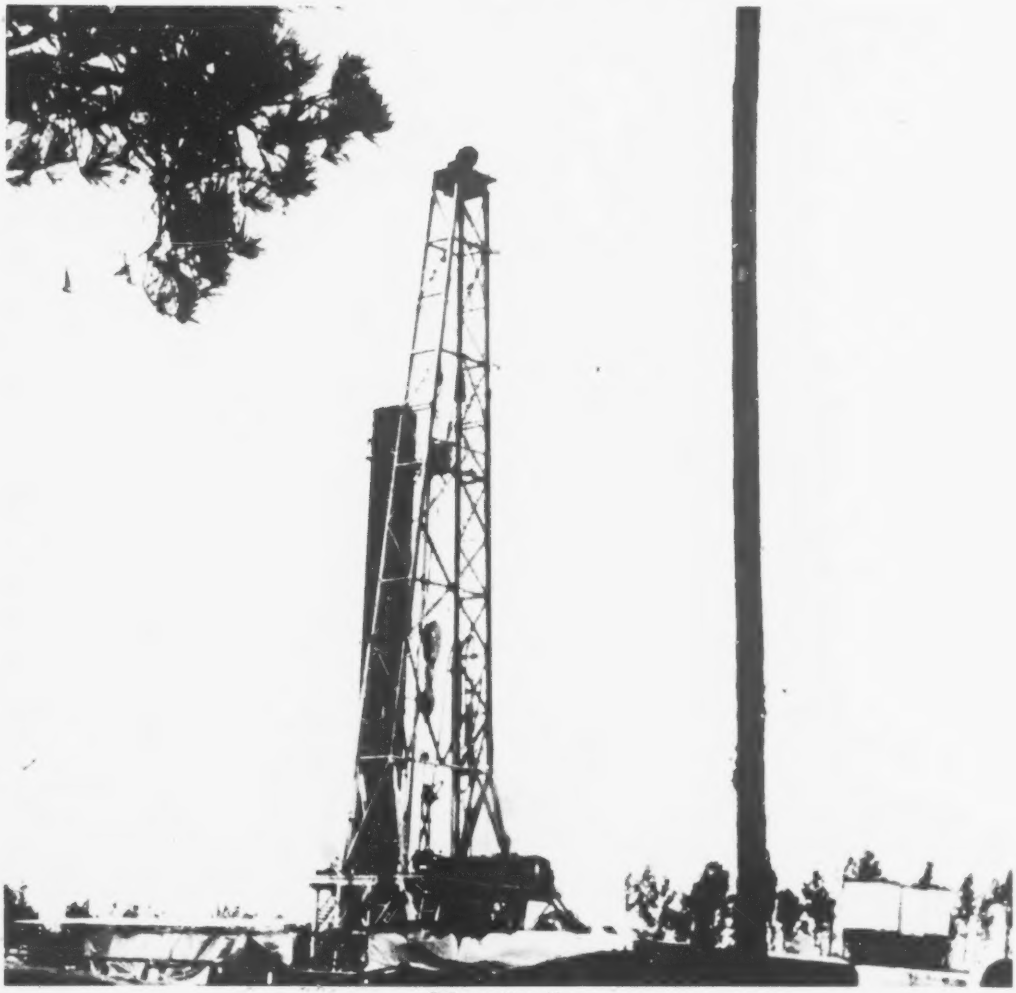
Oil & Gas



Oil exploration

Mississippi's commercial production of oil dates to September 5, 1939, when the Woodruff No. 1 well was brought in near Tinsley in Yazoo County. Commercial production of natural gas in the state dates to October 6, 1926, when the Carter No. 1 well began producing near Amory in Monroe County.

Since these discoveries, Mississippi has become one of the major oil and gas producing states in the nation, ranking eleventh among petroleum producing states in 1979. In 1979 the total value of oil and gas produced in Mississippi amounted to approximately $626,000,000, and the petroleum industry's overall annual contribution to the economy of the state was in excess of $800,000,000.

A total of 19,264 wells had been drilled in the state from 1939 to January 1, 1980, of which 7560 were completed as producing wells and 11,704 were dry holes. At the beginning of 1980, Mississippi had a total of 2894 producible oil wells and 504 producible gas wells.

GOVERNING AGENCY

The State Oil and Gas Board was established by the Mississippi Legislature in 1948 to promote and regulate the development, production and utilization of oil and gas resources in Mississippi; to protect the public and private interests against waste in the production of oil and gas; protect the coequal and correlative rights of owners in a common pool of oil and gas to the end that each owner in a common pool or source of supply of oil and gas may obtain his just and equitable share of the production therefrom; to obtain full development in all producing pools of oil and gas by progressive drilling of other wells; and to protect the environment against pollution.

The Oil and Gas Board is a self-supporting department that derives its revenue from a maintenance tax imposed on oil and gas produced and sold in the state and from fees for permits to drill.

PROVED RESERVES

In 1979 Mississippi's proved oil reserves were estimated at 176 million barrels, and the proved natural gas reserves estimated to be 1.5 trillion cubic feet.

HISTORICAL FACTS—OIL AND GAS PRODUCTION

Date of first commercial oil discovery	September 5, 1939
Location of first discovery well, Section 13, Township 10 North, Range 3 West, near Tinsley in Yazoo City	No. 1 George C. Woodruff
Total wells drilled from 1939 to January 1, 1980	19,264
Total dry holes drilled from 1939 to January 1, 1980	11,704
Total producing oil wells from 1939 to January 1, 1980	6,573
Total producing gas wells from 1939 to January 1, 1980	987
Percentage of dry holes since first discovery	60.8%
Proved crude reserves	176 million barrels
Proved natural gas reserves	1.5 trillion cubic feet

Mississippi crude oil production in 1979 was in excess of thirty-seven million barrels, a continuation of declining crude oil production since 1970, when crude production peaked with over 65 million barrels produced.

Natural gas production, however, is on the upswing. Since a peak of more than 253 billion cubic feet produced in 1956, natural gas production declined until 1977, when the downward trend was reversed. in 1979, nearly 189 billion cubic feet of natural gas was produced. Increased exploration and pricing incentives are two of the reasons for this increase, a trend which is expected to continue for several years.

Ports and Waterways

Port of Pascagoula

The busy water terminals of Mississippi's largest port are located in the Bayou Casotte industrial area on the east, and in the Pascagoula River on the west. During 1980 the port handled its greatest annual volume of commerce, 28.3 million net tons, representing a 3.9% increase over the previous top tonnage year of 1979.

The major commodities handled were:

Export — Ores and concentrates, fertilizer and materials, petroleum and petroleum products, bulk grain, bagged rice and flour, paper products, timber products.

Import — Crude rubber, phosphates and chemicals.

Port of Gulfport

Mississippi's only state-owned deep water port is located at Gulfport. The value of the port facilities is placed at more than $25 million and includes 45,000 square feet of refrigerated transit facilities.

Approximately 1,128,128 revenue tons passed through the Port of Gulfport in fiscal year 1980. Gulfport is now the largest banana port in the United States, and has had major gains in steel, frozen products, cow hides, fertilizer, cotton, fish meal and rice.

A Major Port

Four hundred and thirty seven ships called at the Port of Gulfport during the year ending June 30, 1980.

Future Plans

Current planning calls for a new roll on-roll off facility to import and export heavy equipment and more refrigerated transit facilities.

Yellow Creek Port

(Yellow Creek State Inland Port Authority)

Mississippi's other state-owned port is the river port of Yellow Creek, located in extreme northwest Mississippi on the Tennessee River. A railroad spur line and a port terminal have been completed. The terminal has some 1,000 feet of barge mooring space, together with transit sheds and material handling facilities.

This project is a joint effort of the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Tombigbee River Valley Water Management District and the Mississippi Board of Economic Development. Some 2,000 acres of land are owned by the port and are available for industrial development.

MISSISSIPPI SOIL & WATER CONSERVATION DISTRICTS

Mississippi is blanketed by 82 soil conservation districts which are local units of state government. Their boards of commissioners establish soil and water conservation policy within the district, determine soil and water conservation needs and objectives, develop long and short-range programs aimed at providing the greatest assistance to landowners, groups, municipal and county governments, and carry out these programs with assistance from federal and state agencies.

The mission of the soil and water conservation districts is to assist landowners in the conservation, development, and productive use of the nation's soil, water, and related resources so that all Americans may enjoy:

—Quality in the Natural Resource Base for Sustained Use.

—Quality in the Environment to Provide Attractive, Convenient, and Satisfying Places to Live, Work, and Play.

—Quality in the Standard of Living Based on Community Improvement and Adequate Income.

ASSISTANCE

Through the district program of technical assistance to local landowners, conservation plans have been developed and conservation practices established on more than 12 million acres of Mississippi land.

District cooperators in Mississippi now number about 80,000,involving about one-half of the land in the state. Since passage of the district law in 1938, cooperators have planted about one billion trees. Most of these plantings were made on poor or idle land which is now producing raw materials for some of Mississippi's largest industries. Cooperators have also established pastures on over two million acres, constructed water management systems on about 3,000 acres, and constructed 120,000 ponds which provide water for agricultural and recreational uses.

The federally assisted watershed program, which the districts sponsor in cooperation with local water management districts, has also made a tremendous impact on the state's economy with annual benefits amounting to about $25 million. Watershed projects made possible under the Flood Prevention Act of 1944 and Public Law 566, and receiving technical and financial assistance through the Soil Conservation Service, are scattered throughout the state. They combine land treatment with flood prevention reservoirs, channel improvements and other structural measures.

Along with the U.S. Corps of Engineers' works of improvement on the main rivers, these projects are providing a coordinated program of protection for hundreds of thousands of acres of valuable land. About 490 flood prevention reservoirs already constructed under these programs also provide many hours of recreational pleasure and more than 2,000 miles of stream channels have been improved.

MAKE-UP DISTRICTS

The districts are units of state government, organized at the top level according to State Law. Each district was created by a majority vote of the involved landowners and is governed by five local commissioners who serve without pay — two are appointed by the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission, and three are elected by the landowners of the district.

FUNCTION OF STATE COMMISSION

The State Soil and Water Conservation Commission is composed of the President, 1st. Vice-President, 2nd. Vice-President and Immediate Past President of the Mississippi Association of Conservation Districts, Inc., seven members elected at the annual meeting of the association, by Congressional districts, State Forester, and the Commissioner of Agriculture. The director of the State Extension Service and the director of the State Agriculture Experiment Station are ex-officio members.

The Commission gives overall guidance to the district program, coordinates district activities; facilitates the exchange of information between districts; secures the cooperation of federal and state agencies in the district work, and disseminates information about districts.

Not only does the Commission give overall guidance to the district programs and working directly with the soil and water conservation districts, but the Commission is also involved in the Mississippi Surface Mining Law. The State Soil and Water Conservation Commission reviews all applications and submits comments pertaining to the reclamation portions of all applications for permits under the Mississippi Surface Mining Law.

The Commission has also been designated by the Governor of the state as the management agency for the agricultural portion of the Mississippi 208 Plan, dealing with Non-Point sources of pollution for agricultural and related lands. Under this program, the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission is trying to achieve by a federal mandate under Public Law 92500, through the cooperation of their local cooperators of the soil and water conservation districts and other interested persons, fishable and swimable waters by 1983.

The Commission referees elections of districts, considers petitions for watershed projects submitted by local groups, conducts hearings and guides priorities for planning watershed projects authorized under Public Law 566.

Department of Natural Resources

CHARLES L. BLALOCK

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

In establishing the Mississippi Department of Natural Resources in 1978, the Legislature declared its intent to conserve manage, develop and protect our natural resources by providing a more effective organization through which the methods of conserving, managing, developing and protecting the state's natural resources could be analyzed, coordinated and implemented.

The duties and responsibilities of the department in meeting the legislative challenge are to evaluate, study, catalog and make available to the public, information concerning the state's mineral resources; to protect, control and conserve the use of water for agricultural, industrial, municipal and recreational puposes; to provide for prevention, abatement and control of air and water pollution and to operate the state parks to provide recreational, natural and historical areas and activities for the enjoyment of the citizens of the state and for attracting tourists to the state.

The department is governed by a 7-Member Commission on Natural Resoures appointed by the Governor for 7-year overlapping terms. The operating Bureaus of the Department include the Bureaus of Geology; Recreation and Parks; Pollution Control; and Land and Water Resources.

BUREAU OF GEOLOGY

ALVIN BICKER, DIRECTOR

The Bureau of Geology, first created by the Legislature in 1850 as the Mississippi Geological Survey, is one of the oldest existing state agencies. It has a long tradition of gathering and disseminating information about the geology, water resources, and mineral resources of Mississippi. Many hundreds of requests for information are answered annually. The results of bureau investigations are published as bulletins, information series, environmental geology series, geologic map quadrangles, and cross sections. State geologic maps are available at the scales of 1 inch equals approximately 8 miles and 1 inch equals approximately 27 miles. These publications are available for sale at nominal prices at the Bureau's Publication Sales office at 2525 North West Street, Jackson. Publication Sales also stocks all available topographic maps of Mississippi; well over ten thousand are sold annually.

Each of the bureau's sections is responsible for a distinct field of endeavor. The Surface Geology Section maps geologic units exposed at the surface and investigates their mineral and fossil content. The Subsurface Geology Section studies the deeply buried rock units, makes cross sections, and gathers data from deep boreholes drilled in the state. The Environmental Geology Section examines the geologic conditions and processes in urbanizing areas, and in general attempts to show the need for the application of geologic data and principles to problems created by human occupancy and use of the physical environment. The Ground-Water Section assists the public and industry in finding potable water supplies, compiles data on water quality and availability statewide, and operates three electrical logging devices in order to aid well drillers and gather geologic information. Two drilling rigs are well utilized in the bureau's technical library, sample and core history, and electrical log files are open for the benefit of professional geologists, students, and the public.

The bureau also has some regulatory responsibilities. The Mining and Reclamation Section has been regulating surface mines for all materials in Mississippi since the recent passage of the state's two surface mining laws. The Bureau's Mineral Lease Division oversees the leasing of state-owned land and the payment of royalties to the state.

BUREAU OF RECREATION AND PARKS

Aubrey Rozzell, Director

The State Park System had its beginning through the efforts of the Emergency Conservation Work Program, better known as the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) during the great national depression. Between April 1934 and August 1935, nine sites strategically located across the state were established and work was initiated to develop these beautiful wilderness areas into state parks.

Over 45 years after the first park was opened (Leroy Percy, July 25, 1935) the number of parks administered by the Bureau of Recreation and Parks has grown to 22 parks, five historic sites and an automobile tour of historic Claiborne County. This number has increased over the past few years as a result of the passage of House Bill 660, which provided $25 million for recreational purposes. Most of the state parks have realized great improvements because of this large appropriation.

The basic functions of the Bureau of Recreation and Parks have been:

1. Preserving and protecting natural areas of unique or exceptional scenic value for the inspiration and benefit of not only the present generation, but of generations to come;

2. Establishing and operating state parks that provide recreational use of natural resources and outdoor recreation in natural surroundings;

3. Portraying and interpreting plant and animal life, geology, and processes included in the various parks; and

4. Preserving, protecting, and portraying historic, cultural and scientific sites of statewide importance.

Toward the fulfillment of these objectives and in the interest of serving all citizens of this state, the Bureau of Recreation and Parks continues in its efforts to improve its operational efficiency and to provide an adequate supply of recreational resources to meet public demands. Such demands increase each year as growing numbers of recreation enthusiasts trek to Mississippi's state parks.

Bureau of Pollution Control

CHARLES CHISOLM, DIRECTOR

The goal of the Mississippi Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Pollution Control is to control air and water pollution and to assist in the orderly development of the state and use of its resources. More specific goals include the establishment of air and water standards and the orderly regulation of those sources that impact those standards.

The department has developed a comprehensive program to deal with pollution, the primary tool being a statewide system of permitting air and water pollution sources. Under the system, the department is empowered to issue, modify and revoke permits for the discharge of air and water contaminants. It may also require proper operation and maintenance of wastewater treatment and air cleaning devices.

To carry out its objectives, the department may issue, modify or revoke orders for discharging contaminants into state air or water; regulate pollution control equipment construction and alteration; and establish air and water quality standards. It also has the authority to levy civil and criminal penalties for violations of the pollution control laws, regulations and orders.

The two principal divisions of the bureau are Air and Water, with both receiving support from Field Services.

AIR DIVISION

The division of Air Pollution Control has two primary functions—protecting Mississippi air quality and controlling emissions from air pollution sources. To accomplish this, the division has two main sections: Plan Review and Air Quality Management.

The Plan Review personnel review and approve engineering plans and specifications for the construction, modification or addition of all pollution control devices.

The Air Quality Management personnel gather and evaluate information through the Ambient Air Quality Monitoring Network, a system of sampling stations located throughout the state.

WATER DIVISION

The Division of Water Pollution Control also has a twofold purpose—protecting Mississippi water quality and controlling discharges from water pollution sources. The primary method of controlling and abating water pollution is through regulation of wastewater and sewage sources.

Within the division, the Industrial Section reviews plans and specifications for the construction, operation and maintenance of discharge sources of wastewater. The section is also responsible for issuing permits to wastewater sources.

The Division's Water Quality Section is involved in a monitoring program and a planning program. The planning program involves reviewing basin and area-wide wastewater treatment plans and proposals.

With assistance from the United States Geological Survey, the water staff takes periodic water samples from throughout the state, analyzes them and compiles the information to provide needed data in formulating and revising water quality strategy.

The regulation of construction and modification of municipal and industrial wastewater collection and treatment facilities constitutes only a part of the division's responsibility. Upon completion of such facilities, the division continues to oversee the operation and maintenance of these plants.

Privately owned wastewater collection and treatment plants whose discharges enter state waters are also regulated by the water division.

Plans and specifications for animal waste treatment facilities also receive review by the staff.

CONSTRUCTION GRANT PROGRAM

To aid in the development and construction of municipal wastewater treatment plants, the Mississippi Legislature established the State Water Pollution Abatement Grant Program in 1968. Administered by the Pollution Control Bureau, these grants provide municipalities the capability to build sewage facilities with federal and state economic assistance. Under the program, costs for various aspects of planning, building, altering, acquiring, extending, inspecting and supervising the construction of treatment works are eligible for grant participation. Any political subdivision that is authorized to own, maintain, and operate a sewage industrial waste or waste collection treatment disposal system is eligible to receive grant funds. Under the previous program, the federal government provided 50% grant funds to eligible projects with a state loan of 25% and the town contributing the remaining 25%. Under the present program, the federal government's share provides for 75% grant funds, with a state loan of 12.5% and the town contributing the remaining 12.5%.

OPERATOR TRAINING PROGRAM

Federal grant regulations for construction of wastewater treatment facilities include a requirement that the plant operator be qualified to operate the facility.

To meet the growing need for trained operators, the bureau employs full-time field repesentatives to conduct a Wastewater Treatment Plant Operator Training Program. The field representatives conduct programs and seminars in locations throughout the state in order to provide every operator the opportuntiy to receive advanced training, as well as on-the-job training within the individual wastewater plants.

FIELD SERVICES

Field offices are located in Ocean Springs, Oxford and Pearl. Personnel in these offices conduct routine inspections of pollution sources to see that pollution control facilities are operating and being maintained properly. They also conduct field investigations of fish kills, oil spills and complaints in order to provide on-the-scene facts for any necessary actions.

Efforts are made by the entire staff to keep the people of Mississippi abreast of the pollution program in the state. With public understanding and support, the department can continue to move forward in an effort to maintain good air and water quality.

BUREAU OF LAND AND WATER RESOURCES

CHARLES BRANCH, DIRECTOR

The Mississippi Board of Water Commissioners, the predecessor agency of the Bureau of Land and Water Resources, was created on April 6, 1956 for the purpose of administering a water rights law. In the early 1950s the state experienced several consecutive years of drought conditions and the State Legislature created the Board of Water Commissioners to administer a program of appropriation of surface waters and further declared that the general welfare of the people of the State of Mississippi requires that the water resources be put to beneficial use to the fullest extent of which they are capable. A program to inventory the water resources of the state was included as part of the board's initial responsibilities.

Amendments over the years added duties of licensing water well drillers and maintaining files on well logs. Water resources planning was added after the passage of the Federal Water Resources Planning Act, and was included in amendments to the State Code. Management of groundwater was added in 1976 with the enactment of legislation that enables the creation of "capacity use areas." Extensive pumping of groundwaters in several localities has created situations such that the use of this mechanism may be employed to protect supplies for future needs.

On July 1, 1978, dam safety was included in the additional duties. Utilizing funds from the National Dam Safety Program, the inventory of dams is being up-dated and dams that are so located that their failure could endanger lives are being inspected. In order to minimize the number of unsafe dams built in the future, written authorization is required for those dams having a drainage area of 50 acres or more. Plans are required when the proposed dam could be a potential hazard.

Mississippi Department Of Wildlife Conservation

Richard Yancey, Director

The Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation was created July 1, 1979, when the Legislature approved and the Governor signed into law Senate Bill No. 2306. The bill repesented one of the most comprehensive pieces of wildlife legislation to come out of the Legislature this century.

In creating the new department, the enabling legislation combined the Mississippi Game and Fish Commission, Mississippi Boat and Water Safety Commission, Mississippi Marine Conservation Commission, and the Mississippi Marine Resources Council. The law mandated the new agency to conserve, manage, develop and protect the state's wildlife, fisheries and wetland resources and administer the boating laws.

The duties and programs of the Department of Wildlife Conservation are under the supervision of a five-member Commission, appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. Present members include: Allen D. Bruton, Scooba, Chairman; L. C. Gollott, Biloxi, Vice-Chairman; Dr. Edmund Keiser, Oxford; Jim Hunter McCaleb, Cleveland; and Fred K. Rogers, Clinton. Commission members are currently serving staggered terms from one to five years. After this initial period all members will serve for five years.

The new law created the potential for revitalizing wildlife conservation work in the state and enhancing professional performances from employees. It gave greater impetus to regulating surplus portions of fish and wildlife populations, enforcing boating safety laws and managing the coastal and offshore marine seafood resource.

Each commissioner is required to post a $30,000 bond before assuming his duties. Any commission member may be removed from the board by a majority vote of the members for missing three consecutive meetings. In addition, members receive compensation for mileage and other actual, necessary expenses, and receive $40 daily while discharging their duties.

As a board, the Commission has the following powers and duties:

—to formulate the policy of the department regarding wildlife within the jurisdiction of each bureau.

—to adopt, amend and repeal necessary regulations and rules to run the department.

—to apply for, receive and expend any federal or state funds or contributions, gifts, devises, bequests or funds from any other source.

—to commission or conduct studies designed to determine alternative methods of managing and conserving the state's wildlife in an efficient and productive manner.

—to receive the advice and counsel of the advisory committees created for each of the department's bureaus.

—to discharge such other duties, responsibilities and powers as are necessary to implement the provisions of the act creating the department.

BUREAU OF MARINE RESOURCES

When the Department of Wildlife Conservation was created, the Bureau of Marine Resources was created within the department with the responsibility of enforcing marine seafood, finfish and boating laws, supervising the quality and productivity of Mississippi's estuarine environment, and guarding against excessive pollution of recreational areas and prime water bottoms for shellfish.

This division and its employees directly touch the daily lives of many Mississippians who come to the state's gulf coast for either marine related business or pleasure activities.

Bureau personnel manage the multimillion dollar commercial and recreational fisheries found along the 370-miles of the state's tidal shoreline. Management of associated wetland areas is important to continued high fisheries productivity, including commercial fish, shrimp and oysters.

The nature and function of bureau activities requires a law enforcement section. Officers patrol the exterior of the barrier islands and Mississippi Sound enforcing the laws and regulations related to shrimping, oystering, commercial fishing and rescue operations.

Continued emphasis will be placed by the bureau on assisting local governments and industry as a means of increasing the state's per capita income and the quality of life for all Mississippians.

BUREAU OF FISHERIES AND WILDLIFE

The employees of the Bureau of Fisheries and Wildlife supervise, manage, and protect outdoor recreational opportunities on the state's public waters and wildlife management areas.

Within the bureau, the game division seeks to perpetuate and manage the state's wildlife resources by meeting one of its greatest challenges—providing adequate public hunting. Members of the technical staff manage hunting opportunities on some 30 state wildlife areas. These areas provide good hunting for a variety of small and big game and waterfowl hunting for some 700,000 state and non-resident hunters.

Continued expansion of the state's deer herd and increased harvest figures each year attest to vigorous management of this resource by division biologists. Accelerating this success is the cooperative wildlife research program inaugurated between the agency and Mississippi State University.

The state's increasing turkey population and hunter success is evidence of successful restocking efforts that continue to provide more hunting in more areas of the state. Restocking of the American alligator has been undertaken to restore populations of these animals in suitable habitat.

In an effort to improve habitat and wildlife conditions on private lands, game biologists provide technical guidance to property owners, hunting clubs and others on recommended improvement practices, game surveys, nuisance animal complaints and harvest recommendations.

The bureau's fisheries biologists exert their efforts in research, management, development, technical guidance and fish culture. Research and investigation projects have been conducted on the four flood control reservoirs in north-central Mississippi and the two reservoirs in the central part of the state. Biologists monitor the brackish water area of Jackson County, pesticide parameters in some delta lakes, and the fishery resources of the Jourdan River.

Fisheries personnel provide better recreation on state lakes through such programs as fertilization and aquatic weed control, installation of gravel spawning beds, brush shelters, winter drawdowns and fish population manipulation.

Development projects by biologists include the completion of the construction of 12 experimental research ponds at Ross Barnett Reservoir. The division's public boat ramp program has installed numerous landings across the state to help fishermen and boaters enjoy public waters more.

Technical personnel within the fisheries division of the bureau have assisted many owners of small lakes and ponds in improving the fishery resources on their land.

Certainly no organized and directed wildlife conservation program will work without a well-trained and efficient law enforcement section. Responsible for not only fish and wildlife law enforcement, the men of the bureau are responsible for enforcing all boating and water safety laws. In addition they enforce cattle theft, litter and pollution laws.

Periodic five-week recruit classes at the Mississippi Law Enforcement Training Academy, along with two-week in-service training sessions are required by all enforcement personnel. Training includes sessions in riot control, first aid, court procedure, civil liabilities, self defense and other topics needed by wildlife enforcement officers. Special instructions are given on identification and application of federal and state laws concerning endangered and protected species, with special emphasis on birds of prey.

The intensive training and experience of law enforcement personnel continue to be the first line of defense in good wildlife management and preventing wildlife and fisheries law violations. Working as a team, field enforcement personnel accept responsibility in all phases of resource management and cooperate with other staff and technical personnel.

BUREAU OF ADMINISTRATION

In creating the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation, S.B. 2306 created within the agency a Bureau of Administration to carryout necessary business functions of the department.

Consolidated within the administration division are the entire departments of accounting, payroll, purchasing, data processing, personnel, motor pool and vehicles, maintenance, printing and records, and public relations.

One of the significant services offered by the Bureau of Administration is the Mississippi Outdoors magazine. As the official publication of the agency, it is mailed free to over 40,000 hunters, fishermen and boaters.

MUSEUM OF NATURAL SCIENCE

Located at 111 N. Jefferson Street in Jackson, the Mississippi Museum of Natural Science is the arm of the agency dedicated to disseminating knowledge of the natural sciences, especially as it pertains to the conservation of the state's natural resources.

Through its research section, interpretation program and exhibits, the museum uses its collected materials, and the knowledge gained by studying them, to educate anyone interested in the natural sciences.

THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

RECREATION

Board of Economic Development

Tourism

William T. Hackett, Executive Director

Mississippi's tourist attractions are, according to a writer for the Dallas Times Herald, "mainly attractions of the heart . . . Mississippi's attractions are its past, its traditions, its casual, carefree lifestyle, and its people." To that he could have added such things as climate, natural beauty, and location. Or pointed out that some attractions in Mississippi are pleasant, unexpected surprises. But the reporter did recognize that the essence of Mississippi's appeal to the traveling public—whatever ancillary reasons people may have for visiting the state—is a respect for history and the natural hospitality of Mississippians.

The Division of Tourism of the Mississippi Department of Economic Development strives to acquaint potential visitors with Mississippi's attractions — the usual and the unusual — through various marketing programs.

Regional, national, and international advertising programs in various media are supplemented by the distribution of brochures on a variety of subjects relative to Mississippi. Publicity stories are sent to newspapers and magazines, and visiting writers are assisted in preparing feature articles on the state. Division personnel attend travel shows to talk with tourists about Mississippi. Staff members urge travel agents and tour brokers to send their customers to Mississippi. Miss Hospitality officially represents the state on talk shows, in parades, and at many types of state functions.

Welcome centers at the state's borders offer visitors a rest stop and information about Mississippi. Area tourists councils support their counties in much the same way the Division of Tourism promotes the state as a whole. And June is traditionally proclaimed Hospitality Month to remind Mississippians of the economic impact of the tourist dollar on the state's economy.

OUTDOOR SPORTS

Mississippi is one of the few remaining states having more acreage devoted to forests them to all other land uses, so good fishing and hunting opportunities can be found throughout the state.

Many rivers, streams, lakes, and reservoirs provide ample opportunity for water sports, and the state's large reservoirs are noted in the following list. In addition, Mississippi's long coastline affords fresh and saltwater and deep sea fishing in brackish inlets and the Gulf of Mexico. Fishing is in season throughout the year, fresh or saltwater.

Nearly a million acres of public hunting lands make up 32 wildlife management areas and three national wildlife refuges in the state, with hunting in season for deer, turkey, squirrel, rabbit, quail, dove, duck, and other game.

For more information on fishing and hunting in Mississippi, contact the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation, P.O. Box 451, Jackson, Mississippi 39205, (601) 961-5300.

Mississippi has a total of 28 state parks and historic sites, most with facilities for fishing, camping, and other types of outdoor recreation. The parks are noted in the following list; for more information contact the Mississippi Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Recreation and Parks, P.O. Box 10600, Jackson, Mississippi 39209, (601) 961-5099.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS

The following list includes reservoirs, state parks, scenic and historic sites, festivals, and other attractions. It is a repesentative sampling of some of the most familiar points of interest in Mississippi, and is not intended to be a comprehensive list. For more information on the attractions listed, or on other items, contact the Division of Tourism, Mississippi Department of Economic Development, P.O. Box 22825, Jackson, Mississippi 39205, (601) 354-6715 or 1-800-647-2290 from outside the state or 1-800-962-2346 within Mississippi.

State Board of Health

Mississippi's history over the past 150 years is dotted with landmarks in public health. In his first year as chief executive officer of the State of Mississippi, Governor William Winter led lawmakers to another historical event: the Legislature approved and the Governor named the state's first provider-consumer board to set policies for the Mississippi State Board of Health.

Legislative action in the 1980 session marked the first major reorganization of the Board of Health in more than 50 years. Enabling laws of the Legislature of 1924 and 1926 had completely removed the health department from politics and placed it under a 10-man board composed of eight physicians and one dentist who would elect the executive officer. In 1966, by legislative enactment, the board was increased to 11 members with the addition of a representative from the optometry profession; subsequently a nurse and a pharmacist were added.

The board, reorganized in 1980, now includes 13 members, two from each congressional district and three from the state at large. The Governor appoints members with the advice and consent of the Senate; all appointees are required to be knowledgeable in at least one matter of jurisdiction of the board. The board appointed in 1980 includes four members with two-year terms, four with four-year terms, and five with six-year terms. All succeeding appointments will be for six years from the expiration of the previous term.

The same legislation that reorganized the State Board of Health created a separate State Medical Licensure Board.

Historical Aspects

For over a hundred years, Mississippians had no protection against disease, except that they could be vaccinated against smallpox or they could flee in a great hurry to a safer place when an epidemic, such as yellow fever, appeared in the community. Thousands died of diseases no longer feared because today's health professionals know how to prevent them.

Although nothing was known in those early days about the manner in which germs were spread, or of vaccines against typhoid fever, diphtheria, or any other disease except smallpox, several good health laws were passed. The first of these laws, aimed at protection from communicable diseases, was passed in 1799. Nineteen years later, in 1818, the City of Natchez established the first health department, and in 1823 a law provided for food sanitation.

As early as the 1850s the Mississippi State Medical Association began a movement to promote public health through a state board, but the Legislature did not pass a law creating the nation's 13th State Board of Health until 1877.

Succeeding Legislatures broadened the scope of the Board's activities. In 1917, lawmakers provided for an executive officer, and, in 1925, Dr. Felix J. Underwood became the first full-time executive officer of the board.

Public Health Emphasis

Historically, Mississippi's public health program has focused on prevention. As many as five decades ago, the state gained national recognition for what the American Journal of Public Health called "a vigorous and growing movement" toward local level health care which would reduce preventable diseases to the minimum.

The trend of emphasis has shifted from infectious diseases and parasitic problems alone to include control of chronic disease and a concern for the quality of life for all citizens through environmental protection and control.

The continued support of preventive health services is the most cost-effective approach to continue Mississippi's progress toward better health status for all state citizens. The State Board of Health concentrates efforts on such aspects of preventive health care as fluoridation, immunization, family planning, hypertension control, and services to high risk mothers and babies.

The shift from an agrarian to an industrial society has produced potentially complex environmental problems, but state leadership has responded positively to offset and control potential environmental health hazards. Particular emphasis has been required in the critical areas of hazardous waste management and protection of the public from harmful effects of ionizing radiation.

Organization

The 13-member State Board of Health is charged with the election of an executive officer, a physician who holds a graduate degree in public health or health care administration or who, in the opinion of the board, is capable of executing the duties prescribed by law. At its first meeting, the reorganized board re-elected Alton B. Cobb, M.D., M.P.H., to a six-year term as State Health Officer.

The State Health Officer directs agency activities through his core staff, six central office bureaus, nine public health district offices, and 81 county health departments.

Within the Office of the State Health Officer are the Office of Operations/Management Analysis, which provides technical assistance to agency units in planning, designing, implementing, and evaluating new and operational projects and programs; the Office of Public Information, which conducts a comprehensive communications effort with the media, public health employees, other special publics, and the general public; the Office of Public Health Nursing, responsible for planning, organizing, and directing the statewide public health nursing program; the Office of Internal Audit; the Office of Public Health Education; and the Office of Public Health Statistics, which collects and analyzes information about life, health, and death in Mississippi.

The Bureau of Administrative Services is the support service arm of the agency, furnishing fiscal, personnel, and administrative services including data and word processing to central office bureaus, districts, and county health departments. The bureau provides pharmacy services and consultation, manages a medical and public health library, and is responsible for physical plant management of buildings and grounds.

In the traditional realm of communicable disease control, the Bureau of Disease Control determines which of the communicable diseases constitutes the most pressing health problems and develops and implements methods of control. To do that, the division maintains a constant monitoring of reported incidences of morbidity and mortality, with investigation and verification of occurrences. Division units include Venereal Disease Control, the Immunization Program, Tuberculosis Control, and Zoonoses Control.

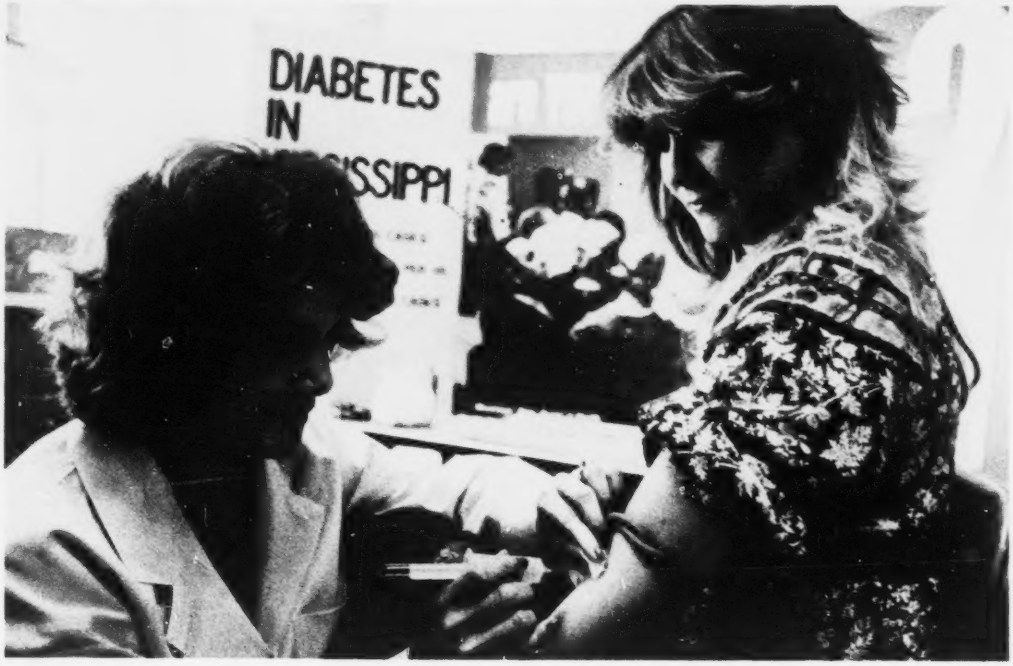
Toward the more modern mandate of applying the scientific methodology of proven public health principles to control chronic diseases, the bureau also provides direction and leadership for such chronic diseases as cancer, arthritis, hypertension, diabetes, and cardiovascular diseases.

In the broad and complex area of environmental health, agency staff concentrate on food and general sanitation, milk and shellfish sanitation, drinking water safety, occupational health, and certification and regulation of child care facilities. Additional areas of emphasis in the Bureau of Environmental Health are hazardous waste management and radiological health. Bureau staff investigate, report, and control, within the limits of authority, environmental factors in these areas which play an important role in the cause or transmission of disease.

The Bureau of Family Health Services' role is to provide program planning and development, direction, technical assistance, reporting, and evaluation for the public health program under its jurisdiction which supply health services to mothers, infants, children, and families.



Divisions within the bureau aim efforts at reducing maternal and infant deaths and at protecting the health of mothers and children; at family planning; at reducing the incidence of dental disease and defects; at early and periodic health screening, diagnosis, and treatment of physical and mental defects in children; at serving crippled children through correcting and reducing physical handicaps or deformities; at nutrition counseling; and at special health problems through the High Risk Maternity Program, the Hemophilia Program, and the Cystic Fibrosis Program.

Additionally, the bureau has administrative responsibility for the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), a multimillion dollar program that provides supplemental nutritious food and nutrition education to pregnant, postpartum, and breastfeeding women, infants, and children up to five years of age.

The development and dissemination of programs, policies, and procedures to public health workers in the county health departments through the district offices is initiated in the Bureau of Local Health Services. The bureau is organized into divisions for fiscal management, facilities management, coordination for training, and for implementation of public health programs and projects. Additionally, the bureau is the coordination point for home health services and emergency medical services.

In addition to routine laboratory procedures on water, milk, and clinical specimens, the Bureau of Public Health Laboratories is involved in approving other laboratories for premarital syphilis serology, drinking water examination, and milk analysis.

Nine public health districts are organized and staffed to exercise management, staff supervision, and program implementation in the 81 county health departments. District-level staffs include a physician director; administrator; disease control coordinator; supervising nurse, sanitarian, a clerk and a secretary.

Toward Healthier People

Prevention of public health problems is more cost-effective than treatment. With a responsible public leadership and an informed public, Mississippi can achieve both cost containment and disease prevention.

People must now take more responsibility for their health; they must be educated about this responsibility when they are children, before undesirable habits are formed. Mississippians cannot afford to continue an attitude of "fix us" after illness strikes.

Income, housing, education levels in Mississippi must be improved. Leaders—and the media, for they play a key role in molding public attitudes—must recognize this and respond to the need.

Health care professionals must assume the responsibility to become leaders in the effort to provide services that would improve the health status of all Mississippians. Information that crosses over the knowledge and experience in geology, engineering, medicine, public administration, and law must be collected, analyzed, and evaluated. On that basis, Mississippians must receive the very highest health protection possible.

Mississippi Health Care Commission

Thomas J. Brooks, III, Executive Director
Mendel Kemp, Chief, Division of Licensure and Certification
Robert M. Pugh, Chief, Division of Planning and Resource Development
Ed Triplett, Director of Business Services

The Mississippi Health Care Commission became legally functional on July 1, 1979, being created by Section 41-7-175 of the Mississippi Code of 1972, as amended. The Commission encompasses the duties formerly assigned to the Mississippi Planning and Development Agency, the Division of Health Facilities Licensure and Certification (under State Board of Health), and the Mississippi Commission on Hospital Care as well as the added State Certificate of Need responsibility.

Commission Membership

The Commission is composed of seven members, one being the State Health Officer, four consumers of health care and two providers of health care. The four consumers are appointed by the Governor (2), Lieutenant Governor (1), and Speaker of the House (1) with the providers being appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (1) and Secretary of State (1). Upon expiration of present staggered two, four or six year terms, each appointment will be for a six-year term.

Organization

The responsibilities of the Health Care Commission are implemented through four divisions: Administration, Planning and Resource Development, Licensure and Certification, and Business Services which is supportive of all divisions.

Functions and Responsibilities

The Planning and Resource Development Division primarily is responsible for conducting and implementing health planning activities for the state, including the development of the Preliminary State Health Plan and Appropriateness Review Standards and Criteria in coordination with other agencies as prescribed by law. This division also assumes major responsibility for review and recommendation of proposals submitted for State Certificate of Need and Section 1122, P. L. 92-603, approval.

The Licensure and Certification Division is responsible for evaluating and carrying out authorized procedures to ensure that health care facilities are maintained in conformance with current codes for safety, quality of services, and staffing requirements. This function is implemented through review of construction plans for new or expanded facilities, periodic on-site visits by qualified health surveyors, investigation of complaints against health care facilities, and regular surveys of the following:

64 accredited hospitals
52 non-accredited hospitals
120 skilled nursing facilities
8 intermediate care facilities for mentally retarded
24 intermediate care facilities
124 home health agencies
25 independent laboratories
15 other related facilities

This division also certifies facilities for participation in Medicare/Medicaid programs.

GEORGE E. ALLEN LIBRARY

George E. Allen Library—Booneville

Libraries

David M. Woodburn, Director

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of the state to allow and promote the establishment and development of free public library service throughout the state as a part of its provision for public education."

For the implementation of this policy, the Mississippi Library Commission was created by the Legislature in 1926.

The Library Commission is charged with the primary responsibility of promoting the establishment and continuing progress of public libraries in Mississippi. Modern library service places emphasis on breadth as well as depth through the use of many outlets to make materials accessible. This is achieved in Mississippi by the formation of library systems with emphasis on multi-county systems. With the comparatively low assessed valuation of Mississippi counties, it takes the combined funds of several counties to provide (1) the necessary trained librarians; (2) good book collections; (3) stationary reading centers; and (4) bookmobiles, or services by mail.

A study of the development of these systems in the state shows that the most fruitful period was from 1950-1980, these productive years being the result of sound planning, based on an extensive survey of needs. The first regional library was organized in 1950 and included four counties. In 1980 there are 17 regional libraries encompassing 57 counties, 23 county library systems, approximately 246 stationary centers, and 56 counties with bookmobile and/or mail library service. Library service has been developed in 17 state institutions, and statewide library service to the blind and physically handicapped has been established.

New public library construction has been at an all time high since 1975, when state revenue sharing funds were first made available to this agency. These funds, matched at the local level, will make possible the eventual construction of 104 new buildings. Prior to 1975 the principal construction was through the use of library services and construction act funds, matched with local funds, which made possible 34 new buildings.

State aid to regional and county libraries has been accelerated in the last five years in the appropriation of funds by the state legislature for the personnel grants program. This financial support, which is specifically for professional personnel at the local level, is making it possible for the libraries to employ or retain professional librarians, one of the key factors in the development of a strong system of public libraries in the state.

Public library development is spearheaded to a large extent by the library commission's consultant service available to public and institutional libraries in the state. Another strong force is the information service provided by the commission. This serves to enable all citizens of the state to have access to the resources of virtually every library in the state. This service includes a statewide system of telephone and teletype communication designed to bring about greater efficiency in providing materials and/or information for special requests filtered through the public libraries. State employees may avail themselves of the help of this department when there is a need for books and materials for job-related purposes. Other services, as well, are available: a central processing center allows economy in purchasing for many public and institutional libraries and provides a processing service for certain state agency libraries, as well as public and institutional. The department of Service to the Blind and Physically Handicapped serves patrons primarily through public libraries. This service was established in July 1970, and has grown from serving 1,351 patrons in that year to approximately 4,000 as of June 30, 1980.

Based on the strong program now in operation and the soundness of the plan to be carried out, the years ahead look promising for continued library development at all levels and in all types of libraries.

MILITARY

- Highway Patrol
- National Guard

Military

Major Gen. Cohen E. Robertson
ADJUTANT GENERAL

The necessity of keeping a strong National military organization has increased the responsibilities and size of the Mississippi National Guard to where today it consists of more than 13,500 men and women.

This breaks down into 11,300 Army and 2,200 Air Guard personnel. Mississippi Guard members are viewed by the nation's active military elements as full partners and are expected to perform as equals in their military specialties.

Mississippi's National Guard is fully integrated into the military Total Force—that is, its mission and assignments and training is the same as that of the regulars. No longer are Guard men and women trained for a part-time mission, but are ready for full time deployment as part of the Total Force, one military team.

The major portion of the money spent on the Guard and by Guardsmen comes from Federal sources. The Federal Government provides funds for drill pay and for salaries of full time personnel who administer the affairs of the National Guard on a day to day basis. It also provides the military equipment, advisors from the active services, school training, and great portions of armory and facility construction.

The state has a command responsibility for recruiting and training personnel, for administering and supervising Guard programs and for providing the state's share of Armory construction.

Currently, the Guard possesses equipment such as aircraft, tanks, artillery, trucks, etc., totaling over $280-million. In addition there are armories, hangars, maintenance shops and other facilities worth in excess of $100 million.

Federal technicians compose the majority of the employees throughout the state. They total more than 14[illegible]0. There are approximately 316 state employees, but just 44 are funded entirely by the state and all of these are in the Military Department Headquarters, Jackson.

Army Guard nurses give aid at field hospital.

Rifleman receives directions by radio.

The Air National Guard is centered around three bases located at Jackson, Meridian, and Gulfport.

The 172nd Tactical Airlift Group at Jackson, which was organized in 1953, has a world wide mission and now flies eight, right off the assembly line, C-130 H model Hercules aircraft. The holder of many records, this unit based at Thompson Field flew the 1000th Air Guard cargo mission to Vietnam during that conflict.

The oldest Air Guard unit in the state is the 186th Tactical Reconnaissance Group at Meridian's Key Field. Flying the supersonic RF-4C aircraft, its mission is all weather aerial photography. It originated in 1938 and was the first Mississippi Guard unit called to active duty in World War II. The 238th Combat Communications Flight also is at Meridian.

Primarily at Gulfport is the 255th Combat Communications Squadron which compliments its Federal mission by giving the state an excellent radio and telecommunications system during emergencies such as a natural disaster. Also at Gulfport is the Air Guard Training Site, and 173rd Civil Engineering Flight.

Camp Shelby, located south of Hattiesburg, is the largest state-owned and operated Annual Training Site in the country. The former World War I and World War II post is host annually to over 50,000 Guard personnel, Reservists, and active military members, most from the First Army area which reaches from New York through the Southeast to the Mississippi River and includes the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Guard units are located in 73 of the state's 82 counties and in nearly 100 communities. These range from artillery to infantry (mechanized) to aviation to medical to military police and include over 400 skills and jobs. Engineers, air traffic control specialists, radar technicians, administrative personnel, heavy equipment operators, firefighrters, and a multitude of other career fields are represented.

Mississippi Emergency Management Agency

J. E. Maher, Director

Emergency Management is the preparation for and carrying out of all emergency measures and functions designed to prevent, minimize and repair injury, damage or loss resulting from enemy attack, sabotage, or other hostile action, or by natural, man-made or technological causes, and the recovery therefrom.

The Mississippi Emergency Management Agency was established by an act of the Legislature during the 1980 session. The Agency succeeds the Mississippi Civil Defense Council formed in 1950. The 1980 Act also established the Mississippi Emergency Management Council which serves in an advisory capacity to the Governor and the Agency Director. Statutory members of the Council are the Governor, Attorney General, Adjutant General and the Director of the Emergency Management Agency. The Director is appointed by the Governor and is responsible to him for carrying out the emergency management program of the State.

The administrative offices of the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency are located in the State Emergency Operating Center, 1410 Riverside Drive, Jackson. These facilities are shared with the headquarters of the Mississippi Military Department. The EOC was constructed with state and federal matching funds as the primary emergency operating center for the state. It contains 28 thousand square feet of fallout protected space to house the essential functions of state government in the event of a nuclear attack. The Agency also owns and operates a radiological instrument Maintenance and Calibration Facility on the grounds of the Surplus Property Commission near Whitfield and a mobile home storage site on property leased from the Whitfield State Hospital.

government in the event of a nuclear attack. The Agency also owns and operates a radiological instrument Maintenance and Calibration Facility on the grounds of the Surplus Property Commission near Whitfield and a mobile home storage site on property leased from the Whitfield State Hospital.

The Emergency Management Agency coordinates the planning and response activities of state agencies assigned emergency functions. Involvement ranges from lost children through unsafe dams, chemical spills, train wrecks, nuclear power plants, energy shortages, etc., to nuclear attack. To coordinate this involvement the agency operates a dedicated state-wide communications system from the Emergency Operating Center, has access to the systems of other agencies and those of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. In addition, the agency operates a mobile command center to provide a broad communications capability for control and coordination of operations anywhere in the state.

The work of the Agency is accomplished through the coordinated efforts of three operating division; the Administrative and Fiscal Division, the Field Operations Division and the Plans and Operations Division. In addition to its operational responsibilities, the Administrative and Fiscal Division provides essential administrative support services for the other divisions.

Public Safety

Sidney B. Berry, Commissioner of Public Safety
Donald Butler, Assistant Commissioner and Chief of the Highway Patrol
John R. Edwards, Assistant Chief of the Highway Patrol

DUTIES: Enforce traffic laws and regulations on the state and federal highways of Mississippi; issue and renew drivers license; supervise and regulate registering of cattle brands; furnish qualified personnel upon request to assist in investigations; make available to any law enforcement agency, on a "no fee" basis, the assistance of the Mississippi Crime Laboratory; make available to any community all the assistance needed in a disaster; staff and maintain the Mississippi law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy.

As Mississippi entered the 1980's, the Mississippi Department of Public Safety began its fifth decade of service to the citizens of the state and the thousands of visitors from the world who visit annually. The motto of the most visible arm of the department—the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol—"Courtesy, Service, Safety," assumed new meaning as troopers mounted an effort to reduce traffic deaths and injuries while courteously providing services to an increasing number of licensed drivers and motor vehicle owners.

A departmental reorganization was implemented on 1 July 1980. Functions of the line, traffic enforcement, criminal investigation, drivers examination, issuance and related activities were placed under Field Operations commanded by the Chief of Patrol. Staff services, including support functions such as communications, services and supply, management information systems, and personnel were placed under the supervision of the Executive Officer, a newly created position under the Commissioner.

The reorganization of the department was for the purpose of better management of resources to achieve its mission and that of its primary arms, the Highway Safety Patrol, the Mississippi Crime Laboratory, and the Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy, both having been placed by the State Legislature within the State Department of Public Safety.

Prior to the reorganization, the department moved to insure promotions based on merit. The Merit Promotional System, implemented in 1980, consists of the following procedures:

Mississippi Crime Laboratory

When a position(s) is known to be open or will be open in the near future a list of such position(s) is published on departmental bulletin boards throughout the state. The Position Open Notice lists the position, the location (town, district, HQ, etc.), the qualifications for each position, any special knowledge or background required, the pay grade, the date, time, and location for the Interview Board, and the date the position is or will be open.

The Interview Board consists of seven (7) members of the Department of Public Safety and an administrative officer. The composition of the board is specified for each operational category. members of each Interview Board are named by the Commissioner.

Names of Interview Board members are kept confidential until the convening of the board. The members are notified that they have been selected to serve on the Interview Board the night before the board convenes.

The responsibility for serving on the board will be rotated among the eligible personnel in order to prevent bias. An administrative officer named by the Commissioner is an ex officio member of each Interview Board and is designated as chairman and the person responsible for insuring that the Interview Board correctly follows the proper written procedure. The administrative officer is responsible for instructing members of the Interview Board in the correct procedure to use. He is also responsible for scoring interviewees and preparing and publishing the score list.

The following factors will be taken under consideration for each applicant:

Past performance with the department (based on evaluation by supervisors)
Basic knowledge and intelligence (common sense and job-related skills)
Personal appearance and communication skills (appearance of person and equipment and ability to communicate orally and in writing)
Time in grade (number of years with the department)
Personal and professional conduct and reputation (commendations, valid complaints, disciplinary actions and professional reputation)

Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol Cadet Graduation

In addition, structed questions are asked of each applicant by the Interview Board. Other tests may be required of applicants for some or all positions. If such tests are required, the type of test and the time, date, and location of such testing is made known to all applicants for the positions requiring additional testing. All applicants will be asked the same questions.

Each of the factors for each applicant is scored privately by members of the Interview Board without discussion or comment. The scores for each factor for individual applicants are then totaled and weighted as follows:

Past performance	Maximum 10%
Basic knowledge (test)	Maximum 40%
Appearance and communication (test)	Maximum 30%
Time in grade (1 pt. per year)	Maximum 10%
Conduct (201)	Maximum 10%
Maximum Score	100%

The highest and lowest score for each factor for each applicant is discarded. The raw scores for each factor for each applicant are then totaled and computed according to the weighting factor (giving the percentage of the maximum possible score). The applicant is given his score as soon as it is computed. A written record of each applicant's scores is made and included in his Departmental 201 File (permanent record).

The scores are ranked in score order and each man's name listed beside his score. A score list is made for each of the positions open. The score lists are publised and displayed on all department bulletin boards.

Three names are submitted for each position to the Commissioner. The names submitted are the names of the men with the highest scores. The Commissioner makes the final decision and the appointment from those names.

All submissions to the Commissioner are in writing and a copy is included in the applicant's 201 File. All appointments are announced and a list of such appointments is published and displayed on all department bulletin boards.

In the reorganization, one additional Chief Inspector was added to provide more even distribution and senior supervision of the uniform patrol service. Districts Two, Three, and Four were placed under the command of a Chief Inspector of the Northern Region; Districts Five, One, and Six were placed in the central Region, and Districts Seven, Eight, and Nine came under the command of the Chief Inspector of the Southern Region.

The changes made at mid-year 1980 were made so that personnel of the agency could focus on attaining its mission which is to:

- Encourage and promote the safe operation of vehicles on the highways of this state;
- Enforce the traffic laws, and such other laws as may be applicable, in a fair, impartial and courteous manner;
- Function as guardians of the public safety in a professional capacity;
- Aid, assist, and support such other functions as may be assigned to it in furtherance of this mission; and,
- Enhance the public esteem for law enforcement by precept and example of each member of the department.

Traffic Enforcement Bureau

The Traffic Enforcement Bureau is the backbone of the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol. It is the largest single bureau, having 436 patrol officers, assistant inspectors, inspectors, and chief inspectors assigned. The first at the scene of floods, jail breaks, tornadoes, train derailments, and other assorted man-made and natural disasters, the uniformed service of the Department of Public Safety is charged with the enforcement of all traffic laws and regulations on state and federal highways. Apprehension of all persons who violate state and federal laws and use the highways as routes of escape is a lateral responsibility. Nowhere is the motto of the patrol more relevant than in the uniformed enforcement branch—"Courtesy, Service, Safety".

Each of the patrol's nine districts is under the direct supervision of an inspector and four assistants who report to the chief inspector of the respective region. Chief inspectors are accountable to the Chief of Patrol for enforcement and service in each region.

General Duties of Sworn Personnel

General duties of all sworn members of the Department of Public Safety/Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol include the following:

A. To patrol the highways of the State of Mississippi in a vigilant and efficient manner and to regulate the movement of traffic thereon.

B. To enforce laws of the State of Mississippi covering the operation and use of vehicles on the highways and those laws designed to protect and safeguard life and property on the highways of the sate.

C. To search for and apply, diligently, such knowledge and means of efficiency as will promote better personal service to the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol and maintain a loyal and zealous attitude toward the patrol.

Coed Graduates—1980

D. To present a dignity of bearing reflected in conduct, neatness, grooming, and physical condition so as to lend credit and distinction to the Mississippi Department of Public Safety/Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol.

E. To strictly avoid all personal involvement in political activities.

F. To execute promptly, without question, the lawful orders of superior officers and to refrain from casting any remark that would tend to hold any office or officer of a governmental body up to ridicule.

G. To realize that the nature of patrol duty may demand service at any hour, therefore, requiring mental and physical fitness at all times.

H. To render to the general public every thoughtfulness and courtesy consistent with the proper line of duty.

I. To cooperate with other officers in general law enforcement but to bear in mind always that a patrol officer's primary responsibility is to the Department of Public Safety/Mississippi Highway Patrol.

J. Duty hours shall be assigned by the district inspector and recorded on a weekly work sheet. Any deviation from the assigned work hours must be on the orders of or by the consent of an assistant inspector or inspector.

K. Each sworn officer is entitled to an average of eight days off per month. Any deviation from this must be on the orders of or by the consent of the inspector.

L. A Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol Officer will wear the complete uniform each working day except when the nature of the duties to be performed would require other dress, and then only with the permission of his immediate supervisor.

M. The only weapon to be work is the official issued weapon without alteration. While off duty and out of this uniform members of the Department of Public Safety/Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol are not required to be armed with a gun.

N. Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol Officers are required to submit a daily report of activities each week or as otherwise required.

Bureau of Criminal Investigation

The reorganization saw the Bureau of Criminal Investigation streamlined to better respond to the demands placed on criminal investigators in the 1980's.

The Bureau of Criminal Investigation of the Department of Public Safety/Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol, whose officers have general police powers to enforce all laws in the State of Mississippi, assists local, county, and federal authorities in the investigation of criminal cases.

All investigators of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation come from the rank of sworn patrol officer and after becoming investigators, are trained in all phases of investigative work.

The bureau consists of the Livestock Theft Division, Identification and Records Division, and three investigation regions.

Livestock Theft Division

The Livestock Theft Division was created to protect the property of cattlemen, dairymen, farmers, poultrymen, and fish farmers.

Investigators of the Livestock Theft Division are responsible for the enforcement of all state laws pertaining to the theft of cattle, horses, hogs, poultry, agricultural products, farm machinery, commercially grown fish, farm chemicals, and dogs used on farms to hunt wild game or herd livestock. Registration of branding irons is a responsibility of this division, also the registration of tranquilizer guns or similar instruments used for the purpose of rendering livestock docile enough to steal; and for insuring that persons authorized to sell drugs for tranquilizer guns maintain records of names and dates of persons making such purchases for a one-year period.

Investigators of the Livestock Theft Division assist the Bureau of Criminal Investigation in the investigation of other crimes such as murder, rape, kidnapping, armed robbery, bank robbery, burglary, auto theft, etc. In addition, these investigators serve as security personnel for visiting governors, the president, and other dignitaries to the State of Mississippi.

Identification and Records Division

Primarily the officers of the Identification and Records Division assist local and county authorities in the investigation of major crimes through the gathering and preservation of evidence at the crime scene, interrogation of suspects, and the comparison of prints with the latent fingerprints lifted at the crime scene. Evidence collected at the crime scene is sent to the Mississippi Crime Laboratory for examination.

The division's criminal files contain fingerprints, photographs, and records of known criminals living in this state or who have been convicted of crimes here. Active and inactive files are kept on all wanted subjects, and reports by division investigators are indexed and cross-filed for future reference. Items issued on wanted persons and stolen property are also on file.

Gun permits are issued by the division and registration data is kept on file.

Since 1957, the polygraph, an aid in the interrogation of suspects in criminal cases, has been used by the Identification and Records Division.

Driver Services Bureau

Under reorganization, the Driver Services Bureau was changed with the Safety Responsibility and Driver Improvement Divisions being combined to form a Driver Assistance Division. The Motor Vehicle Inspection Division was added and combined with the Implied Consent Division. These divisions along with Driver License Examining, Driver License Issuance and the Statistics Division make a total of five divisions under the Driver Services Bureau.

This bureau is charged with examining all new applicants for Mississippi driver licenses, issuing and renewing driver licenses, maintaining a complete driving record file on all drivers in Mississippi, taking action to improve or suspend the drivers who accrue bad driving records, training law enforcement officers in the principles governing breath tests to comply with the Implied Consent Act of 1971, administration of the Safety Responsibility Law, the compilation of all facts and figures for the Department of Public Safety and the supervision of all motor vehicle inspection stations that insure motor vehicles are safe before they may be operated on a public street or highway.

The master file in the Driver License Issuance Division has been closed and its information stored on microfilm and the computer.

Mississippi Crime Laboratory

The Mississippi Crime Lab is a complete forensic medicine-science laboratory that offers the services of its personnel on a "no fee" basis to any law enforcement agency in the State of Mississippi. This laboratory was established by an act of legislation in 1956, and began operation in 1966. It has grown since that time to the present, with the capability of serving the state and its political subdivisions.

The laboratory, under the management of a director and associate director, employs toxicologists, criminalists, instrument specialists, and evidence technicians. Its 1980-81 buget was $1,153,937 with 39 employees authorized.

These laboratory personnel are all qualified as expert witnesses in court proceedings on the basis of their education and experience.

The services they provide include toxicological analyses, identification of drugs, blood alcohol determinations, identification of hairs and fibers, seminal fluid examinations in suspected rape cases, identification and analyses of illegal liquor, fingerprint examination and comparison, soil comparison and identification, tool mark and safe insulation comparisons, ballistics examinations, paint comparison, and examination for accelerants in suspected arson cases.

The main laboratory is located at Interstate 55 and Woodrow Wilson Avenue behind the offices of the Department of Public Safety. The building, which was opened in 1976, encompasses 18,750 square feet of floor space including three drug labs, an evidence storage vault, specialized instrumentation rooms, and complete firearms identification and weapons firing facilities. Other areas are designed for use as serology labs, X-ray diffraction, scanning electron microscopy, mass spectrometry and comparisons of hairs, fibers, and fingerprints. In addition, there is a separately enclosed area for forensic examination of motor vehicles.

In an effort to provide increased availability of services to the State of Mississippi, two satellite laboratories have been established on the Gulf Coast and Batesville to serve the southernmost and northern-most counties of the state.

Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy

Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy

The Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy, created within the Department of Public Safety for the purpose of training state, county, and municipal law enforcement officers, completed its 14th year of professional instruction in 1980. Since the first students arrived in 1966, over 17,600 certificates of training have been awarded for courses completed at the academy.

The Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy, a source of pride for all law enforcement officers in the state, is located on 243 acres near Whitfield in Rankin County. The academy offers living and classroom space for approximately 150 students in addition to a well-equipped gymnasium, five firing ranges, and obstacle/confidence course, and a driving-skills practice area. The academy staff consists of the director, training officer, administrative officer, counselor, six instructiors, three clerical personnel, and 11 support personnel. These 24 employees are responsible for all training activities and the important support functions necessary for a smooth operation. The budget of $783,169 in 1980-81 authorized a staff of 24 employees.

The academy continues to upgrade the instructional staff with members attending annual training sessions to better qualify them for teaching in their respective fields. Guest instructors continue to be added to the list of qualified individuals who substantially augment the full-time staff.

Summary

Established by the Mississippi Legislature in 1938, the Department of Public Safety has grown from a fledging traffic enforcement agency to a complex department with modern training facilities, a statewide communications network which reaches the smallest hamlet to the state's largest cities, a multi-million dollar crime lab which services the needs of two and a half million citizens, a fleet of new automobiles and aircraft.

As the department faces the decade of the 80's, it glances back at a modest beginning over 40 years ago. The services the department renders with its budget of 24.5 million dollars, its 822 authorized employees, its force of professional law enforcement officers will always be in the interest of safety, a service rendered with courtesy.

With these qualities ingrained, the people who make up the Mississippi Department of Public Safety look to the challenges of the last decades of the 20th Century with confidence.

Federal-State Programs

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

Dick Molpus, Coordinator

Federal-State Programs, Office of the Governor, was established by Executive Order in 1968 to administer federally-funded programs within the Governor's Office and to serve as the Governor's liaison with officials of federal agencies. The newly established goals for Federal-State Programs are improving overall administration and increasing efficiency in the delivery of services. The goal of improving overall Federal-State administration was realized through consolidation of its sixteen programs into seven departments and reorganization of the Office, which the Legislature endorsed during the 1980 session with statutory recognition. By the end of the legislative session, the reorganization had already resulted in a 25 percent reduction in personnel costs, with the savings applied to delivery of services by Federal-State Programs.

The head of Federal-State Programs is the Coordinator. In addition to having administrative oversight of personnel, programs, and a budget of more than 150 million dollars, the Coordinator also serves as special advisor to the Governor on Federal-State relations.

The following are the departments of Federal-State Programs:

Department of Audit and Evaluation
Mr. Donald T. Sullivan, Director

The Department of Audit and Evaluation oversees and conducts internal and external audits and/or evaluations at the request of either the Governor or the Coordinator. It researches laws and regulations governing management responsibilities of recipients of federal funds as they relate to audits, monitoring, and prevention of fraud and program abuse. The Department is responsible for serving as the focal point for all audits within Federal-State Programs, ensuring that appropriate actions are taken on shortcomings and qualifications noted in audit reports, working closely with private firms on financial and compliance audits required by federal grant conditions, establishing professional evaluation systems which save costs, and conducting checks into the background of prospective employees.

Department of Administration
Mrs. Ann H. Cook, Director

The newly-organized Department of Administration is responsible for major centralized functions in the areas of budgetary and fiscal matters, cash management, accounting, purchasing, contracts, Revenue Sharing, personnel, employee training, constituent services, public information, word processing, and legal services. The performance of the duties of the Department in the most efficient and economical manner possible is one of the keys to reducing Federal-State administrative costs and applying those resulting monies to delivery of services.

Department of Planning and Policy
Mr. George W. Parsons, Director

The Department of Planning and Policy provides the overall comprehensive planning effort for Federal-State Programs. The Department also seeks out, identifies, and analyzes new federally funded programs and projects and, when it is in the best interest of the state, assists in preparing applications for grants for new funding sources. The Department of Planning and Policy serves as the liaison between Federal-State Programs and Mississippi's ten Planning and Development Districts and also the state's universities. Special programs include assistance to twenty northeast Mississippi counties through the Division of Appalachian Development in Tupelo and administration of the programs funded by the Intergovernmental Personnel Act, which provides grants to strengthen the personnel of state and local governments. In addition, through research and analysis the Department aids the Governor in developing his policies and programs.

Governor's Office of Human Development
Mrs. Constance Slaughter-Harvey, Director

The social services agencies within Federal-State Programs are now combined into one major department, the Governor's Office of Human Development, which serves the needs of the state's children and their families and of elderly, handicapped, and low-income Mississippians; the Office also develops programs for voluntary citizen participation. The primary purpose of the program for children's services is the delivery of comprehensive child-development services to Mississippi's children and youth and to their families. The program for handicapped services develops activities to educate all Mississippians to the advantages of including handicapped individuals in all phases of community living. The Office of Human Resources acts as an advocate for the poor through resource mobilization and coordination and operates special programs that have potential statewide impact on poverty. The Office of Voluntary Citizen Participation unites citizens and human-care agencies throughout the state in a common effort to enhance the quality of life for all Mississippians. The primary objective of the Office is to promote the optimum utilization of volunteers in the delivery of human services. Older persons in Mississippi are assisted by the Council on Aging so that they may live independent, meaningful, and dignified lives in their own homes and other residences as long as possible. Its work is supervised by a 21-member Council appointed by the Governor.

Governor's Office of Criminal Justice
Mr. L. Patrick Moreland, Director

The primary responsibility of the Governor's Office of Criminal Justice is to work toward reduction of crime and improvement of the justice system through planning, funding, grant administration, evaluation, and audit. The Office is governed by the Criminal Justice Planning Commission, which is comprised of 30 members, 24 of whom are appointed by the Governor. Maximum input is sought from the supervisory Commission, local and regional planning units, and other criminal justice and local officials throughout Mississippi. A plan of goals and objectives based on priorities is designed after data are collected identifying key juvenile justice, court, corrections and law enforcement problems across the state. Implementation, monitoring, and evaluation of programs complete the cycle.

Governor's Office of Job Development and Training
Dr. Robert L. Robinson, Director

The Governor's Office of Job Development and Training receives grant funds from the U. S. Department of Labor as authorized in 1978 by the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. The primary purpose of the Office is to raise the per capita income of the economically disadvantaged in Mississippi through expanded opportunities for education and training. The Office operates through the four divisions of Field Services, Fiscal, Programs, and State Employment and Training Council. The programs of the Office are directed towards both adults and youth in Mississippi. Eight councils serve the Office by providing it with strategic input: the Education and Training Council, the Prime Sponsor Council, the Private Industry Council, and five Area Advisory Councils. The functions of the Office are performed in coordination with all other manpower programs, both state and federal.

Governor's Highway Safety Program
Mr. Roy Thigpen, Director

The primary objectives of the Governor's Highway Safety Program are to promote and coordinate traffic safety activities in Mississippi; to assist in the reduction of deaths, injuries, and property damage as a result of traffic accidents; and to administer approximately 18 functional code areas. The Governor's Highway Safety Program provides financial contributions to local governments in the areas of planning and administration of highway safety programs, driver education, police traffic services, and emergency medical services and handles special projects, such as alcohol countermeasures, traffic engineering services, and traffic records.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS GENERAL ELECTION NOVEMBER 6, 1979

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 507

A Concurrent Resolution to amend Section 254, Mississippi Constitution of 1890, to provide that the Legislature shall apportion itself in the second year following the 1980 decennial census and every ten years thereafter and may apportion itself following any other federal census; to set the membership of the Senate and the House of Representatives; and to repeal Section 255, Mississippi Constitution of 1890, which provides for apportionment of the Mississippi Senate.

House Concurrent Resolution No. 33

A Concurrent Resolution proposing an amendment to Article 6 of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890, to add a new section, to be designated as Section 177A, authorizing the Legislature to create a Commission on Judicial Performance.
